 a double tulip bowl, with applied rosettes and graceful standards. Perfectly beautiful glasses.
 Price $47.00

The head of George Washington in Ironstone forms the most unusual Toby jug we have ever seen. This is a large Toby, 9½" tall overall. He wears his colonial hat with cockade, and embossed on the side of the hat is the word Washington. Wonderfully decorative! Price $28.00

Beautiful little pine dressing table with graceful scrolled back and delicate tapering Hep-pelwhite legs. Very early, wooden pegged together, has been painted white and should be refinished or decorated. Has a drawer with original brass pull. Perfect structurally, and very pretty. Price $38.00

Very ruffled cranberry cake basket in a handsome silver plated holder that stands on four feet and has lovely handle. The glass is old overlay and is shaded from deep cranberry to delicate pink with a white center. Condition pristine. Price $32.00

 4" tall. Price $16.00

A most unusual and handsome old copper sauce pan with flat cover and both pot and cover have long copper handles with hanging holes. This is the old French pan dovetailed together on bottom, and gleaming bright. Holds 4 qts., a beauty! Price $14.00

Very impressive Victorian mantel set consisting of black onyx and ormolu clock with French movement, and a pair of black onyx and gold ormolu candlesticks that hold three candles each. All pieces stand on square ormolu feet, and the set is extremely handsome and authentically "of the period" clock in perfect running and striking condition. Price $86.00

An old handmade wooden doll cradle with shaped hood. Measures 14½" long and 8½"

COLLECTING ANTIQUES IN AMERICA

By THOMAS HAMILTON ORMSBEE

There has never been a book on antiques quite like Collecting Antiques in America. Written for both the beginner and the experienced collector, it is an informal history of American furniture, glass, silver, paintings, prints, porcelains, pottery, textiles, needlework and metal wares. It is at the same time, a highly provocative raison d'être for those many enthusiasts who haunt country auctions, rummage in attics and search endlessly for a Sanderson desk, a Sandwich candlestick or an Autograph quilt. One of the first crafts practiced in America was the making of furniture. With the author as guide the reader is taken in search of the secret drawers and hidden compartments in the desks, secretaries, chests, sideboards, and highboys which were designed and made by the early Colonial cabinetmakers, candlestands, cupboard highboys, the beautiful pieces designed by the Sandersons of Salem, Queen Anne furniture, the small sideboards of New England and the distinctive furniture that are here.

Because of its rarity and beauty, early American glass is almost priceless. Mr. Ormsbee tells the fascinating story of both the Vermont Glass Company and the Boston and Sandwich Glass Company, and describes the superb articles made by them as well as by independent manufacturers. The scope of the book rapidly widens as the author deals with the many types and periods of silver of the various periods, of our quaint local art, of porcelains and pottery ranging from Gaudy Dutch desks to Adam Caire and his Poughkeepsie Cocks, of rugs from rags, of Birmingham and the brasses it produces, and lastly of the oddities in antiques which are so purely American—penny banks, painted mirrors and strange mechanical clocks. Index. $2.98

AMERICAN POTTERS AND POTTERY

By JOHN RAMSAY

Completely revised, here is the latest, (1947), edition of a standard work for collectors or dealers in American pottery. Describes every type of regional pottery, earthenware and porcelain (Staffordshire, Rockingham, redware, brownware, stoneware, Majolica, Whiteware, White Granite, Queensware, etc.) as well as full information on the ceramic history of many other wares. 192 full-page photographs, showing a variety of pieces in full detail: Jugs, Water Coolers, Human Figures, Animals, Vases, etc. There is a large section giving checklists of pottery types, potters, potteries and pottery marks. Data includes location of each pottery, names of owners and their successors; dates of foundation, changes in ownership and final closing. Also: types of ware made with maker's marks, any distinguishing characteristics, and other valuable information to aid rapid and exact identification. This book is a "must" for any collector's bookshelf. 364 pages. Profusely illustrated. Index. $2.98

Antique Furniture of The Walnut Period

The chapter on spurious furniture will repay you many times over, in savings, for the purchase of price of this valuable volume $5.00

AN ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ANTIQUES

By HAROLD LEWIS BOND

NEW EDITION—this general reference work to the whole field of antiques contains more than 3,000 entries and cross-references, describing and defining in clear, authoritative language the entire usable fields of Furniture, Pottery, Porcelain, Glass, Textiles, and Metalwork. To make it easy-to-use, this treasure-chest of information is first classified according to principal subject: Furniture, Glass, etc., and then arranged alphabetically, so that it becomes a simple matter to find the solution to any problem in antiques. In addition to giving the meanings of terms like Card-Cut Ornament; Canterbury; Prince of Wales Feather; Deal; Davenport; Dentil; Faenza; Chival-Glass; Swift; Stump Work, etc., there are also sections on Where By Whom, and When the particular antique was made, and all of its distinguishing characteristics. 64 full-page photographic plates showing rare and fascinating pieces. More than 200 drawings supplement the text, and make identification easy and exact. Ideal for handy reference use by layman, expert collector, dealer or student, the book includes a biographical section, giving data on Stiegel, Spode, Savery, Shaw, Duncan Phyfe, Samuel Pierce, Paul Revere, Daniel Marot, Hepplewhite, Hitchcock, Wren, Wedgwood, and others. Complete, from highboys to lowboys, from silver goblets to pewter trays, china vases, German glass, Venetian lace, and Worcester porcelain, here's a book of inestimable value, to provide the quick and reliable information you may need at a moment's notice. 7x10". 389 pages. ## If I could only get to Boston and get some new stock!

How many dealers have said that same thing? But you can get to Boston and you can get stock. Dealers all over the country do and they don't even leave their place of business.

How is it done?—Mail Order Service with a reliable firm that has years of service in its field because it satisfactorily meets the needs of its customers.—Richard R. Fine & Sons.

Only recently we made up lists of goods available in our six-story building and the response has been tremendous. Everyone wants a crack at the goods. We try to meet the dealer's requests for photographs and if none is available, we sketch and give as good a description as possible.

But it is gratifying to receive letters from dealers saying how pleased they are. They know, if they are dissatisfied, we will take the necessary steps to see things are righted.

Our system is calculated to serve all antique dealers; the lady that buys an occasional lot; the big dealer who comes here and buys a carload or a vanload.

If you are a dealer and have not received our latest list, write for it immediately. Do not deprive yourself of good customers by not having the right stock. You will always be sure of finding the right stock at reasonable prices at:

Saints of St. Augustine

Nothing in the history of collecting, we believe we can say without reservations, has aroused as much interest as the announcement in our August issue telling of the new Lightner Museum of Hobbies at St. Augustine. Letters from our readers are still pouring in.

I. W. Wilenchik, metallurgical magnate of Philadelphia, is sending his collection of shells for the shell room in the museum. The shell room will be the second best display of its kind in the world. It was started here in the Chicago museum but has never been finished. The entire wall will be shells, lighted with hidden bulbs shining on the green abalone. The molding will be two rows of brown helmets and underneath the large pink conchs, containing light bulbs showing through the pink conch and reflecting up on the brown helmet. Underneath this molding will be squares in various design, each containing shells from all the seas of the world, and still underneath the wainscoting will be a design dominated by the rich Mexican murex.

Mr. Lightner got his idea of the shell room when he visited the entrance hall of Potsdam Palace, near Berlin, which was built by Frederick, the Great. The entire great entrance hall was made of shells in the form of Gothic arches and represented all the different seas. Today we have the advantage of electricity so that the effect of our shell room will be still more startling. In display cases will be a collection of old shell work in the form of baskets, crosses, boxes, etc., which were made as a hobby 100 years ago. Still another case contains a marvelous collection of mother-of-pearl articles of various types, showing the exquisite richness of this material. If some one had such a room as this down the road in Florida, he would charge our admission price to see this shell display alone.

Mrs. E. E. Shauer, New York, sends a collection of thirty old glass marbles and also a collection of calico buttons, one of the nicest we have seen. Mrs. Shauer explains that the old buttons are mounted on a piece of her mother's wedding dress. Her mother was married 78 years ago and her parents were pioneers in Devil's Lake, North Dakota, settling there in 1876. She says, "I cherish this piece very much and want you to have it for the button room in your museum in St. Augustine."

Mrs. Queen Gridley Thomas of Chicago, donates to the museum musical department, a historical cornet. Mrs.

Thomas' mother, Eleanor Gridley, was a famous writer on Lincoln subjects. While she was getting material for her articles, she lived in the same log cabin, in Coles County, which the Lincoln family occupied for about a year until they moved on to the Springfield location.

Mrs. Laura Blanchard, mother of Mrs. L. Erwina Couse, co-author of Button Classics, writes that she wishes to donate a stained glass window in the Button Room to be placed beside that of Mrs. Marguerite Maple's. This is certainly a beautiful sentiment on Mrs. Blanchard's part and we shall provide a suitable companion window.

We keep a file of letters we get in our office and some of them are excruciatingly funny. One party offered to part with two pipes for which he expected to get enough money to start in business. Quite often we get letters offering something worth $5 or $10 which they will sell for enough to buy a home. Smart alecs lead them to these ideas.

Mrs. Anna Nay of Missouri, has made an addition to our mustache cup collection as well as our interesting collection of salt dips.

One of the most thrilling gifts that has been offered, as far as those of us in HOBBIES office is concerned, is the offer of Vera Vimont of Santa Barbara, Calif., to paint a portrait in oils of Mr. Lightner. It happens that we in the office here planned to raise the money secretly among ourselves to have this done. Miss Vimont is an artist of rare ability. She has done portraits of many celebrities, including the scientist Einstein and Pope Pius XII. The latter is hanging in the Franciscan Monastery in Santa Barbara.

Similarly, Mrs. Ginger Zwick, Orchard Park, N. Y., who describes herself as a "modern grandmother" is making a picture of the Alcazar Hotel, now the Lightner Museum, in filet crochet. Such intimate items will be hung in the waiting room at the entrance of the museum, where several antique desks, chairs and settees, will be placed for the visitors to rest and to send post-cards home to friends.

Mrs. Maybelle Waldo Wurster, Portsmouth, Ohio, sends us an 1844 hymn book. Many people collect along this line. Mrs. Wurster plans to spend the winter in Florida and promises to visit us in St. Augustine.

Mr. Walton O. Folk, Marietta, Georgia, sends to the museum an early Blickendorfer typewriter, with wooden carrying case.

Question—How can you give a stained glass window in your museum for $100 or even $500? You can't have one made for that.

Answer—You're right. But we have these windows. We have collected them from all over the country for 20 years. The sum we ask only helps to pay the cost of fitting them in the proper frames and fill in or take out to fill the proper space in their new setting. These donations help the museum to that extent.

Joseph T. Mahoney of Newport, R. I., writes that he is making a large picture of the museum building in St. Augustine by using postage stamps. We have seen some of these pictures executed from varied colored stamps and they are quite effective. Mr. Mahoney's contribution will be placed in the Stamp Department, where we are sure it will be enjoyed for years to come by all visitors.

Mrs. W. E. Shaffer, Vicksburg, Mich., writes that she will donate to the Museum a large collection of old ladies' collars which were always made of lace. In addition, she is sending a very large collection of small articles of wearing apparel from the early Mid-Victorian period, many of which the present generation have never seen. This exhibit will be of extreme educational value.

Alice L. Carlisle, Goshen, Conn., will donate a beautiful collection of butterflies collected by her aunt. There are about a thousand specimens all permanently mounted. This is one of the oldest hobbies and will make a colorful exhibit that will be greatly appreciated by the museum.

Mrs. Milton Ansterburg, Coldwater, Mich., is sending to the museum a beautiful silk cape covered with jet bead work with a waist beaded to match, which will be greatly appreciated. This material comes from about the 1870 period and will grow more valuable as the years pass.

Mrs. V. L. Curran, California, donates one of the most interesting items in our Civil War collection. Mrs. Curran relates that when her grandfather, Edman H. Mathias, Co. H. 105th Ohio, Vol. Inf., was with Sherman on his march to the sea, they took from the Milledgeville Hotel, seat of the first Georgia State Capital, a set of silver, and the hotel name is still readable. She desires that this relic of an unfortunate war should be returned to the South where it belongs. Many thousands of residents of the neighboring state of Georgia will take an unusual interest in this historical silver.

Lyle L. McMahan, Pennsylvania, sends an interesting piece of hand wrought iron of colonial days which will be of special interest in the ancient city. The museum will have an interesting collection of such primitives.

Reader Comments

New York—I cannot tell you how very happy I was to read about your museum and I shall be happy to contribute whatever I can from time to time. I visited St. Augustine in 1909 and expect to go again when the Lightner Museum is open to the public. In the meantime, I am enjoying reading about it in HOBBIES.
—JULIA K. SHAUER

Minnesota—On a visit to St. Augustine last winter I found it a most interesting city, ideally suitable for your museum and shops in connection.—BYRON W. PUTNEY

Illinois—Please accept my congratulations upon the successful completion of the St. Augustine Museum project. Mr. Lightner's faith in the future of our great country is not only evidenced by his magnificent gift to St. Augustine, but also by his completely honest and frank editorials. We need many more men with his insight and forthrightness. I am most happy that his health has improved and sincerely trust that his conquest of arthritis will be as complete as his unquestioned supremacy over New Dealism, unfair prices, and his driving unscrupulous dealers to cover.—LUCILLE LEWIS

Florida—We are proud that Florida was chosen for the Lightner Museum of Hobbies. We feel that it will be a great memorial to a great man.—CAROLYN J. WARD

Ohio—I plan to spend the winter in Ocala, Fla., and expect to visit the Museum. Think it is a most wonderful and befitting gift to the oldest city in America. Congratulations and continued good health.—MRS. MABELLE W. WURSTER

Ohio—I, too, wish to add my sincere approval of the St. Augustine museum to the many you have been receiving. It is a great monument to a great magazine and a greater publisher. I look forward to seeing it sometime.—ELIZABETH MOORE

Jacksonville, Fla.—Not only Florida but all of America should be deeply appreciative to you for the incomparable museum you will soon have in St. Augustine.—ROBERTA BENNETT

North Carolina—Please let me tell you how wonderful we think your St. Augustine purchase is and we can't imagine anything more interesting than to make the gorgeous old Alcazar hotel a Lightner Museum. It seems like something out of this world, and we are extremely proud of Mr. Lightner. Can't wait to get down to Florida again and see the place.

We always thought it was a gorgeous old castle. The August HOBBIES was most interesting with such a splendid surprise.—MRS. T. WALTER GRIMES, JR.

New York—When I read about the permanent museum in St. Augustine, I was so thrilled and excited about it—and kept thinking about it so much, that I couldn't get to sleep, and had to get up and take a sleeping capsule!!! I trust I may be permitted to be represented there by some contribution from Long Island.—KATHARINE E. WILLIS

Georgia—The thought behind the opening of the new Museum of HOBBIES was certainly an unselfish one. It will be a pleasure to collectors of all times, and will stand as a great memorial to Mr. Lightner.—ESTELLE DANIEL THOMPSON

Gainesville, Fla.—First and all important is to express to you my very great joy in that you are placing your fine collection in Florida. St. Augustine is an ideal selection in our opinion. With the thousands, may I chime in with my sincere gratitude for your generosity. We are hoping to be among the first visitors.—EMMALINE BUCHHOLZ

Georgia—Allow us to welcome you to the proverbial "Sunny South." You made an idea choice in your selection of St. Augustine for your Museum of Hobbies, and the people of that city used equal judgment in seeing that you sponsored the same. With your knowledge and gifts and their willing co-operation we are sure the project will be most successful. As Georgia neighbors, we shall look around to see if there isn't something we'd like to donate to the collection.—MARGUERITE AND I. C. JOHNSON

West Virginia—My absence from the office on a vacation trip for several weeks has prevented my writing you until now to express to you my sincere congratulations upon your generous plan for providing a National Hobby Museum at St. Augustine. I have read with great interest your announcements concerning this project in HOBBIES and I know that I voice the sentiments of hundreds of hobby enthusiasts throughout America in voting you the number one philanthropist of us all. Your generosity will be a monument to your memory for many, many years to come. I recall my visit to your office and home, together with Mr. Boyd of my company a year or so ago and I am so happy indeed to note that you have recovered your good health since that time. Congratulations and best wishes on the St. Augustine project and may God bless you richly and guide your footsteps through long years of happiness and good health.—HERMAN P. DEAN

HOBBY TOWNS ARE HAPPY TOWNS

Editorials in the St. Augustine Record

If it's true as Cynthia Lowry, AP Newsfeatures writer, says, that hobby towns are happy towns, then St. Augustine is going to be one of the happiest towns in this country.

We will be a hobby town in the biggest possible way when Otto C. Lightner opens the Lightner Museum of Hobbies here, in Hotel Alcazar. As probably everybody in St. Augustine knows now, Mr. Lightner bought the Hotel Alcazar in which to house his hobby collections, which are being brought from Chicago. He has given the city a trust deed, which insures this great benefit for the city in perpetuity.

Countless people have hobbies—things that claim their interest, and satisfy the collector's instinct.

Probably before too long this city will have as a hobby the Lightner Museum, lavishing on it a generous amount of civic pride and pleasure.

The Associated Press writer says that there are hobby towns all over the United States, in which a single project, game or legend is the avocation. She cites Prescott, Arizona with its Snake Dances; Gainesville, Tex., with its community circus; Roanoke Island, N. C., with its symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony";

CIRCUS COMPLAINT BOOKS

By A. MORTON SMITH

One of the most interesting and apparently one of the scarcest items in the field of circusiana is the complaint book. In the 20 years I have been collecting, I have seen only two specimens, both of which are in my collection. Furthermore, I have shown them to many advanced collectors, none of whom had seen one before.

The two books were issued by Barnum & Bailey and Ringling Brothers Circuses for the season of 1917. They were confidential books intended only for the information of staff members of the respective shows and for that reason few copies were circulated outside the ranks of circus executives.

The complaint book is not very impressive in appearance. Each of the two I have is 5½x8½ inches in size, containing about 100 pages of mimeographed text, cheaply bound in cardboard with the simple title, "Ringling Brothers Complaints, Season 1917," typed on the cover.

But the information contained in each of the books makes most interesting reading for the circusiana collector. The complaint book lists each city and town played during the season in order, with dates of showings. Under each date is given a digest of the difficulties encountered as regards advertising, publicity, distribution of complimentary tickets or passes, purchase of feed, hiring of transportation for country route billposting, meals for billing crews, obtaining lots and licenses, and other pertinent information.

Contributing to this digest are the press agents, advertising car managers, press agents and legal adjusters.

Purpose of the volume was to provide a ready reference for agents making the same cities and towns in following years of difficulties that might be encountered and suggestions for avoiding them.

At that time, the two circuses were owned by Ringling Brothers and it was their policy to alternate the shows over two general routes in successive years. Therefore, the complaint books were exchanged between the executives of the two shows for future guidance.

Among the most frequent entries in the complaint books were references to newspaper relations. For example, a Barnum & Bailey press agent, reporting upon a managing editor's demand for more complimentary tickets than were tendered, advised: "He (the managing editor) became abusive and said that I need never come into the office again, that he would put me on the black list in all (of his chain's) newspapers and made some remarks as to my lack of circus experience and to the fact that no circus press agent ever before had kicked about the number of tickets. . . . while I was waiting for my cuts, (the editors) joined in personal remarks as to the awfulness of my fate and the fate of the show in future years, and to my utter lack of ability as a press agent."

Another press agent, reporting on an engagement in a southern city warned to "look out for a girl reporter (whom he named). I assigned her to do a circus girl story and before she started on the job she demanded $100 which of course, she didn't get. She's a bold grafter, and when she can't get the money she begs for a new pair of shoes to take the place of those ruined on the lot. It will be best to stay away from her because she may decide to roast a show some time. Incidentally, she is a clever woman."

Agents didn't hesitate to criticize the contractors who obtained lots and made arrangements for foodstuffs required for the personnel of the shows.

In an Iowa city, the 24-hour man reported for one show that "If anyone ever looked at this lot they would know that we could not use it. Contractor contracted lot without seeing it, for had he seen it he or anybody with the show would know that no Barnum or Ringling could get their show on 531x272 foot space.

Another 24-hour man sarcastically suggested "Please notify agent that our cook house is open Sundays," after reporting that "we had to hire bakers to bake bread Saturday night, as Saturday is day off."

Trouble over other needs of the circus occurred during the season. On one occasion, it was reported "the man at the water plug turned off the water at 5 p. m. and took hose to corner saloon and refused to turn on water until he got four reserved seat tickets." And a 24-hour man recorded: "Two years ago I panned this feed man on the squawk sheet and again he was contracted for feed. Two years ago he was caught short eight bales and this time I had him put 102 bales of hay on a wagon and asked him the weight next A. M. I weighed the same and he was 500 pounds short."

How to handle individuals with whom the shows had to deal were suggested occasionally. A press agent reported that the business manager of a certain newspaper "handles all publicity and tickets and is inclined to be tight unless jogged up." And he added: "He is a hard boiled egg, but can easily be cracked if handed a little soft talk." Then a legal adjuster, reporting on the mayor of a midwest town, observed: "He is inclined to tell how much he personally advertises the show and how he is responsible for the closing of the schools, etc., etc., and then tries to get strong on tickets and tells of damages to streets, etc."

However, along with the complaints and "squawks," the agents often reported very satisfactory dealings. Of an Indiana newspaper, a press agent reported "the paper was very liberal and did not ask for any additional tickets. It was the most satisfactory agreement of its kind we have ever made." Sometimes there were such brief reports as "Everything O. K. here," and "Old lot, everything fine," from the 24-hour men.

Down through the day-by-day reports were chronicled accidents involving circus personnel, damages paid for injuries to spectators, for damage to streets, lots and buildings, and other information which make the complaint books as valuable as route books for the historical material which they contain.

It is probable that many shows have issued complaint books for their executives in past years, but if so, they have been carefully guarded and have not reached the hands of many collectors. Therefore, they are very desirable and rare items which collectors would cherish.

Mechanical and Electrical Antiques

By ROY MOSORIAK

With this issue, HOBBIES magazine starts a new section which will be devoted to "mechanical and electrical antiques" not already covered in the "Music," "Timekeeper," and "Vehicle" sections. While the term, "antique," may turn a few people livid or purple with rage when applied to mechanical or electrical devices of so recent a period as 1910, we demonstrate patiently: (A-1) that said people are living longer than their forebears; (1) that we are on the threshold of the electronic and atomic age of work-doing machines in 1947 A. D.; (2) the mechanical and electro-mechanical work-doing machines of the period, 1870-1910, are at most only 77 (seventy-seven, not 117) years old; (3) that they are truly "antique," gauged on our "scientific" progress during the past 77 years.

In this section of HOBBIES magazine, we hope to cover, in time: hand or foot-operated yarn-winders, spinning - wheels, sewing - machines; spring-motor-operated apple-peelers, cherry-stoners, roasting-spits; electro-mechanical devices such as early telegraph transmitters and receivers, early telephones, domestic- and fire-signal systems; early "business machines" such as typewriters, adding machines, abacuses, text-reproducing machines, copying machines, and "office"-work-doing machines of all kinds.

Where to start such a section in "time" is difficult to determine. The "beginning" would be a good place to start. But shall we go back to the time of the Greeks and Romans?—back to the Magi of Media and Persia? — back to the early Arabians?—back to the time of the Hero of Alexandria? — back to the early Egyptians? — back to the Chinese and their "South-pointing-Chariots?" —back even to Moses, the "first engineer," who, Scripture tells us, fetched water out of a rock by smoting it twice with a rod?

You, by your letters and epistles, can pick up the thread of "mechanical and electrical antiques" where you wish.

We hope this section will engage the attention of long-suffering husbands who "sit in the car" while their ladies go inside antique shops to be charmed by glass, china and furniture. Tell your friends of this new section of HOBBIES magazine for all "red-blooded, he-men" which

William Hogarth

By BETH GONCIAR

On November 10, 1947, collectors of William Hogarth's works will celebrate the 250th birthday of this great English artist. It will be a field day, particularly for such collectors as Herman H. Diers of Washington, D. C., who has 150 steel engravings by Hogarth. As HOBBIES contribution to the celebration, a sketch of the artist's life is presented below.

o o o

The English master Hogarth, was born in Bartholomew Close, London, the son of Richard Hogarth, a school teacher. As a boy, he showed little interest in academic pursuits and idled away his days in a classroom by drawing sketches in the margins of his books and papers.

Aware of his son's aptitude, the boy's father apprenticed him to a silver-plate engraver who taught him the principles of the work. A shop card which young Hogarth engraved while in his employe is still in existence.

Fascinated by the art of engraving and stimulated by his basic experience, Hogarth opened his own engraving business in 1720, and proceeded to engrave arms and bills. Later he designed plates for book sellers and subsequently completed "Masquerades and Operas" (1724), and the finest of his book illustrations, the twelve engravings for Butler's Hudibras (1726).

For a time Hogarth turned to the painting of small, full-length oil portraits, 12 to 15 inches high. Thereafter, in the period between 1728-32, he created in oil "The Wanstead Conversation," "The House of Commons Examining Bambridge," and several pictures of the actors in Gay's Beggar's Opera. During this period he married Jane Thornhill (1729), the daughter of Sir James Thornhill.

The first of Hogarth's works to cause a furor and to class the artist as a genius, was his "Harlot's Progress," in six prints (1731). Relentlessly realistic and powerfully dramatic, it fitted in with the mood of the times and became immensely popular. A pantomime and ballad opera were taken from it, and the scenes even were painted on cups and saucers.

"A Rake's Progress" (1735), a sequel to the former in eight plates, was not greeted with the same enthusiasm as its predecessor. Between the above two works came the prints, "A Modern Midnight Conversation," and "Southwark Fair" (1733). Following thereafter were the prints, "Consultation of Physicians," "Sleeping Congregation," and "Distress Poet" (1736), "The Scholars At a Lecture" (1737), "Four Times of the Day," and "Strolling Actresses Dressing in a barn" (1738), and "Enraged Musician" (1741). Large Folios: "Fast Trotters On Harlem Lane"; "The Farmers Home Harvest"; "Celebrated Four In Hand Stallion Team". Details on request.—Van Dorens, Antiques, Clinton, Mich. n1006 belong also the paintings, "The Pool of Bethesda" and the "Good Samaritan" (c. 1736).

"Marriage a la mode," (1745) Hogarth's masterpiece, portrayed life in the upper strata of society with a greater vigor and realism than his "Harlot's Progress." Unfortunately there were no eager buyers for the painting, and it was sold in 1751, for the paltry sum of 120 guineas.

Many of Hogarth's earlier paintings met a similar fate. However, portrait painting was more remunerative for him, and he received substantial sums for doing the likenesses of Garrick and Simon Fraser.

The artist's later important works include "The Stage Coach or Country Inn Yard," and the twelve plates on "Industry and Idleness" (1747), "Gates of Calais" (1749), "March to Finchley" (1750), "Beer Street," "Gin Lane," and "Four Stages of Cruelty" (1751), "Four prints of an Election" (1755-58), and Credulity, Superstition and Fanaticism, A Medley" (1762). The artist's portrait with his dog, Trump, was done by himself in 1745.

Hogarth's paintings are noted for their color harmony and dexterity in composition. His engravings are full of vigor and spirit. Indisputedly, however, his fame rests on his humor, satire and dramatic powers—qualities for which he is unsurpassed.

A RARE "PENDULUM" WATCH AND "MYSTERY" FOB CHAIN

By ROY MOSORIAK

(Copyright 1945)

Recently the writer received a gift of a watch and fob chain apparently made in Holland. The donor, Jacques J. Tutein Nolthenius, said he bought it in Delft, Holland, over 40 years ago and that it was represented as having been made in 1750 or shortly after. With advance notice of the arrival of the gift, you can imagine how eagerly I anticipated it. When I opened the package I found the watch and fob chain you see illustrated.

It is a silver pair-cased watch, outer case 6 cm. in dia., 3 cm. thick; inner case 5 cm. in dia., 2.8 cm. thick. Engraved on the movement itself is "Hermanus Caspari, Leyden." A silver watch-cock bears a sphere over which is a sickle held by a seated and winged "Father Time" who also wears a beard. Square pillars have silver filigree ornaments fastened to them with screws. Both screws and wedges are used in the movement. The so-called "pendulum" consists of a weight on the visible end of the balance arm (and one weight also on the other end of the balance arm, but hidden from view by the silver cock). (Prof. Milham says: "Not many such watches were made and the idea was soon abandoned . . . It was a very inconvenient arrangement, as it was too hard to get at the balance for purposes of regulation".) It has a verge escapement, with fusee, and worm screw beneath the barrel. A watch paper mounted on ribbed silk was inside the outer case. The printing on it bore:—"J. Ayenhuys, — Mr. — Horloge maker — 16?? (two figures indecipherable) — Delft."

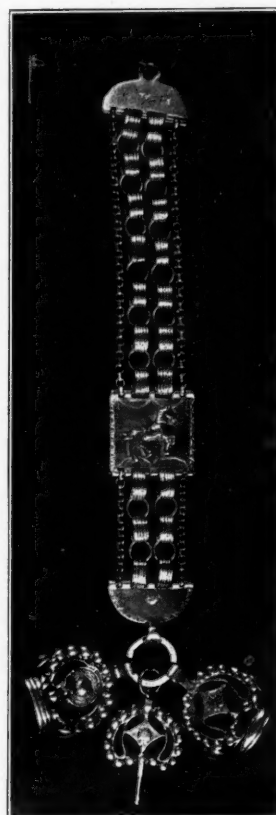

The scene on the outer case is a Biblical one. I recognized it as Jesus Christ talking to Peter. The basin of water and towel which girded Christ recalled the foot-washing of the disciples by Christ, an event which is commemorated to this day in the Christian faith and especially by the King of England each Maundy (Holy) Thursday.

I hastened to find the exact passage in the Scriptures which would explain the scene on the outer case in detail. I found the scene explained in the Gospel according to St. John. (But I should like to remark here that I was in a puzzlement for three hours, sensing I was to discover something about this watch which was unknown for perhaps a hundred years. My absorption by this feeling was so complete I did not realize that 3 hours of a Sunday afternoon had passed.) Then, like a flash, I "saw through" the symbolism of the watch's odd fob chain. The fob-chain itself by its arrangement, construction, number of chains and links indicates the exact passage in the Scriptures which describes the Biblical scene on the outer case!

The Gospel, according to St. John, is the 4th book of the New Testament — which number is indicated by the four outer chains of the fob-chain.

The chapter of St. John in which the scene is described is the 13th — which number is indicated by adding the silver links (wide ones) in one row to the three links in the second row. The verse which introduces the scene on the outer case is the 6th, indicated by the six links in the short part of the fob-chain. The verse in which this Biblical episode ends is the 20th verse, indicated by the total number of links in the short and long parts of the fob-chain. The 14 links in the long part of the fob-chain puzzled me, —till I realized they must indicate the "heaviest" part of the lesson to be learned from the foot-washing. The 14th verse reads: (Gospel) "If I then, your Lord and

A rare fob chain bearing hidden meaning

Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet."

To complete the symbolism of the fob-chain, the end pieces of the fob-chain, connecting the watch to one end of the chain, and the seals and watch-winding key to the other end, are shaped like the hasps of locked book covers.

The entire passage, St. John, Chapter 13, verses 6 — 20, reads:—

"6. Then cometh he to Simon Peter; and Peter saith unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

7. Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.

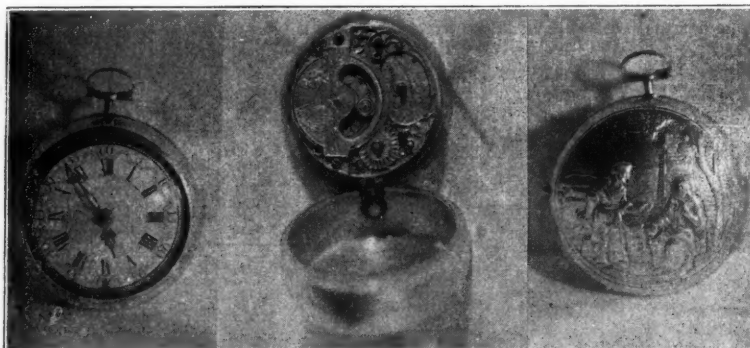

8. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.

9. Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10. Jesus saith unto him, He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean in every whit: and ye are clean, but not all.

11. For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12. So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and Three views of rare "pendulum" watch was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13. Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well, for so I am.

14. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15. For I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you.

16. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

17. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18. I speak not of you all; I know whom I have chosen; but that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me.

19. Now I tell you before it come, that, when it come to pass, ye may believe that I am HE.

20. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me."

This lesson in humility is not all that is contained in Chapter 13.

That Chapter also contains what is termed in dictionaries as "The 11th Commandment", given in verse 34:—"A new commandment I give to you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."

The crown seals, a regal crown and a regional crown are unengraved, but from the motif I judge they symbolize King William III of England and Queen Mary, (see 1688, English History) who formerly ruled Holland as Prince William, Consort, and Queen Mary — The House of Orange. Note: None of the "standard" books on watches list either maker. In an effort to identify the maker of this watch and perhaps uncover still more interesting data, I wrote to H. Broke, Amsterdam, Netherlands, and sent him photos of the watch and fob chain. He replied:

"My opinion is that this watch was made in the early 18th century, — about 1720, and so was the fob chain. The watch paper inside the case is misleading. This watch has a spiral, and a watch about the end of the 17th Century hasn't one. I cannot find in any of my books the name of the watchmaker, Hermanus Caspari, Leyden, or Auyenhuis, Master Horloger, Delft."

Through the research kindly done by Miss C. Van de Velde, Rijksmuseum Van Oudheden Te Leiden, I learned that the archives of Leyden, Delft, and a little museum in Amsterdam contained nothing about either name. Arthur Tremayne's research in London revealed nothing. Details of its maker are still a mystery. Can any reader of HOBBIES help unravel the mystery?

MECHANICAL AND ELECTRICAL ANTIQUES

will be devoted to "mechanical and electrical antiques."

Pawls, gears, pinions, gear-ratios, sun-and-planet wheels, inside diameters, outside diameters, coils, armatures, poles, magnets, gyroscopes, governors, safety-valves, by-pass valves, orifices, lode-stones, cranks, temperature - indicators, wood-burning locomotives, pistons, Geneva-stops, etc., all will eventually be expounded in this section.

You can enjoy merely reading every word published in this section; but if you like to "tinker" too, as many men do, so much the better! As a starter, may we ask:

"Who invented the wheel?"

"Who was the first man to apply the force of gravity to work-doing before the Law of Gravitation was established?"

"Who invented the spring-motor?"

Your answers should fill three issues!

We already know of three prospective readers of this section: the first collects all tools made especially for left-handed (sinister) people! — the second collects examples of early electric-light bulbs — showing the various metals and materials used for incandescence! — the third collects early examples of household devices such as carpet-beaters, washboards, flat, sad, and fluting-irons used by the good housewives of the past . . . . . devices which would be instruments of cruel torture to our modern "home-makers."

There is only one limitation put on this department — we will not cover perpetual-motion machines. If you hanker for perpetuo moto, please do not look for anything on this subject in HOBBIES magazine. If, by chance, errors creep into the text of this section, we assure you they are made unintentionally. May we remind you that modern astronomers correct for errors in the motions of the planets of the Solar System itself?

Courtney Lock Collection

When the National Contract Hardware Association convened in Chicago recently, visiting members viewed the well known Courtney collection of locks which was exhibited in the convention hall simultaneously. The Courtney collection is now owned by Charles Kendrick, president of the Schlage Lock Company of San Francisco. The collection was assembled as a hobby by Charles Courtney, president of the International Association of Master Locksmiths. The collection is comprised of some 200 specimens, the oldest being about 1,000 years old.

In this assemblage there are padlocks made in the form of animals and toothbrushes. A lock called the "Chest of the Hapsburgs" is somewhat tricky. Three gadgets on three sides of the lid must be pressed simultaneously to flip open the tiny door which holds the lock.

Art and Mythology In Cameos

Those who take the time to search the stories on old cameo jewelry, are well rewarded. Among the subjects noted on a recently assembled collection were two lava cameos, which depicted two of the Muses—Calliope, muse of epic poetry and Terpsichore, muse of choral dance. Aurora, goddess of morning, shown weeping tears of dew for the death of her son, Memnon, is a beautiful subject, which the cameo artist has utilized frequently. Others are Aphrodite, goddess of beauty; Apollo, god of the sun; Euphrosyne, Thalia and Aglaia, mythological patronesses of grace, courtesy and gaiety; Artemis (Diana), goddess of the moon.

There are many more subjects portrayed on cameos as the discerning collector soon learns.

Cameo cutting is an old art. The origin of the word is not definite, but very likely it is derived from the Arabic word "Camea" meaning "amulet." The carving of cameos is believed by some to have originated with the Babylonians and taken to Egypt and to Greece by the Phoenicians.

Close-up of necklace that is said to have belonged to a member of the Bonaparte family. It is made of gold in three colors and is set with amethysts. This choice piece is now in the jewelry collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, N. Y.

At the time that Alexander, the Great, was reaching out for new worlds to conquer, cameo cutting was at its zenith.

Among history's famous collectors was Pope Paul II in the fifteenth century who collected cameos.

LITTLE KNOWN PAINTERS

By ISOBEL GORDON

Robert Robert Fulton, whom we think of as the inventor of the steamboat, was, in his youth, a painter of portraits, landscapes, and miniatures.

Born in Little Britain township, Pennsylvania, in 1765, he went to Philadelphia as a portrait painter in 1782 and within four years had earned enough money to establish his widowed mother on a small farm clear of debt. He then went to London to study under Benjamin West for several years, afterward establishing himself in Devonshire under patronage of men of wealth. In 1797 he began experiments in submarine navigation and torpedo warfare. As early as 1803 he had, with the financial assistance of Chancellor Livingston, launched a steamboat on the Seine, which immediately sank, though a partial success later achieved, encouraged him to build the famous "Clermont", which, in 1807 set out on her historic voyage to Albany. Robert Fulton died in New York in 1815.

Samuel F. B. Morse, known chiefly to us as the inventor of the telegraph, made his living until he was about forty-eight by painting portraits and miniatures.

He was born in Charlestown, Mass., in 1791; graduated from Yale in 1810; became a pupil of Washington Allston whom he accompanied to London where he studied under Benjamin West. In 1815 he returned to America and painted portraits in Boston, Concord, and Charleston. He settled in New York where, in 1826, he became one of the original founders of the National Academy of Design, and its first president, serving from 1827-45 and again 1861-62.

In his youth when he painted miniatures he charged $5.00 if the sitter provided his own ivory; the rate for profile drawings was $1.00.

Among his later important paintings were the full-length portrait of Lafayette in the New York City Hall, and the large picture of the old "House of Representatives by Candle Light" now in the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D. C.

oOo

Charles Willson Peale who was born in Charlestown, Md., in 1741 and now thought of as a portrait painter, had other accomplishments in his most active life. He studied, almost unaided, and learned to paint miniatures, engrave in mezzotint, mold in wax, and cast in plaster. He is said to have received some instruction from Copley in Boston, and some encouragement from Benjamin West during a visit to London.

When the Revolution began he was in Philadelphia and at once took an active part in it and in State politics. He was a captain of volunteers at the Battle of Trenton, and represented Philadelphia in the Pennsylvania legislature in 1779. While in the army, and afterward, Mr. Peale painted the portraits of a number of men prominent in the military affairs, besides doing much work in ordinary portraiture.

IN THE LAND OF SLEEPY HOLLOW

A New Congregation Spot For Hobbyists

Sunnyside, the "little snuggerly" and cottage of Washington Irving, America's first world-recognized author and a diplomat of the first grade, is now open to the public as the second of the restorations in the Sleepy Hollow Region made famous by Irving, himself. Philipse Castle Restoration has now been open four years and has become the shrine of those hobbyists and collectors who wish to see early Dutch-American life and living as it was in 1683 and 1785. Here the archaeological treasures, dug right on the premises, are considered the best of their type and time in America and are studied by experts and fans alike. The heirloom treasures, ranging from furniture and fixtures to rare farm implements, are not to be seen elsewhere. The buildings, themselves, (the Castle, the famous Old Mill of Sleepy Hollow which has actually early grinding machinery, the ancient barn, the slave cottage, the smoke house, the wharf, the Dutch garden and what not) are unique and fascinating, the whole forming an early pioneer manor center and trading post.

It is interesting to find that the earliest structures at Sunnyside, forming a Dutch outpost, are known to have existed in 1656, even before Philipse Castle, and the foundations had been discovered. Certain shards found on the premises resemble those at Philipse Castle Restoration. However the original buildings were burned during the Revolution and new structures erected shortly after peace was declared. It was this second set of buildings which Washington Irving loved as a youth and presently bought to save from destruction and form his home. Probably he knew a great deal about the first buildings also, from local tales.

Sunnyside is now restored with the same authenticity and meticulous detail as Philipse Castle Restoration.

To any lover of Washington Irving's yarns, Sunnyside, in many ways, is "Wolfert's Roost" come true, with a fine dash of the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow" in the neighborhood, and "Rip Van Winkle" also emphasized in the "Rip Van Winkle Lounge" where real Catskill furniture vies in interest with paintings of scenes from "Rip" and other "Ripiana". Nor is this all. Down by the Gorge is the famous medical spring of Indian days and in another spot near the railroad track is the spring brought over from Holland in a bucket as per "Wolfert's Roost" and now refreshing thirsty track crews of the New York Central Railroad with whom Irving exchanged many a courtesy. There's the cove, with the tree to which WI tied his boat. The Little Mediterranean! The stone where WI used to sit and browse! The well that supplied his fresh water system which the Restoration engineers found and mapped out in detail!

From the monument to Irving by Daniel Chester French at the corner of Albany Post Road and Sunnyside Lane, the entrance to Sunnyside is scenic and lovely. Inside the grounds this scenic road continues to a parking lot overlooking the lordly Hudson and having an outdoor waiting room among great ancient evergreens. Then it is but a step to the Rip Van Winkle Lounge, a welcome and a brief walk, teeming with vistas, to Mr. Irving's front door.

Little Sunnyside, as restored, is a treasure inside and out. Irving designed it himself and it has an indescribable something that makes it different from any other spot. Irving's tastes were cosmopolitan and his collections show it. His furniture has some most unusual pieces and is often of the most obscure period in American decoration, i. e. between the late Colonial and the late Victorian period dominated by Eastlake. Both the outside and the inside of the house are a constant series of surprises. Furthermore this is Irving's OWN home and not what has been shown the public, rarely it is true, as a museum of living items.

It has been generally known that the large majority of authenticated Irving items, with the exception of manuscript (in which field the Restoration does not enter into competition with its friends the New York Public Library, the Huntington Library, the Yale University Library and others who specialize on this sort of thing) has been at Sunnyside and has included his huge private library embracing the large foreign language library and most of his furnishings and fixtures, souvenirs, original paintings and drawings by friends and illustrators of his works. Even this vast assemblage of varied collectors' items has been augmented by other Irving material and also items which, in the museum of the Restoration, furnish, literally, a three-dimensional biography of one of America's' most versatile and cosmopolitan men. Irving, for example, made quite a fete of Christmas and so there may be seen, at his Restoration, Christmas ornaments of his time. The dining set, before which it is thought Irving actually sat, is a collector's conversation piece. And everything is shown, as in his home, except, of course, in the museum.

The project is under the general direction of Dr. Hugh Grant Rowell, as Director, and his associate of Philipse Castle Restoration, Mrs. Alice M. Runyon, as full-time Assistant Director. Mrs. Runyon has done a notable piece of research on the life of Irving and on Sunnyside itself, encouraged by the friendly advice and help of many authorities, including George S. Hellman and Professor Stanley T. Williams of Yale. It is the results of her research, plus evidence in the house itself, which have dictated the details of the Restoration, including the decoration, which is notable. A large staff of consultants, many of them previously aiding at Philipse Castle Restoration has been utilized and many of the contractors and workmen have served previously with the Rowell-Runyon team.

The Sunnyside Restoration is owned by and has been restored by Sealantic Fund, Inc., founded by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose gifts have made the project possible. Over a half million dollars has been spent on the project already. Over a million and a half dollars, largely contributions from the same source, has been spent on Philipse Castle Restoration. The two projects, within three miles of each other and easily accessible by train, bus or automobile, dovetail, yet are wholly different and represent different types of technical restorations. Philipse Castle Restoration brings back the life and living of an historical period (1683 to 1785) in a certain section (New York) of a certain stock (Dutch), in this sense representing the same type of restoration as Colonial Williamsburg, (the latter being a Colonial Capital and PCR an early industrial settlement, manor center and trading post.) Sunnyside is of the group of restorations built around the life of one man, in this way having common ground with Mount Vernon, Monticello and the Jefferson Davis home at Biloxi. Because of the rich information available, Sunnyside has been thought by some to be the best documented of restoration.

At both restorations special provisions are made for guest comfort. At PCR there is a lovely outdoor picnic ground while at Sunnyside the Rip Van Winkle Lounge provides a parallel service. In both instances trained but not oratorical guides furnish information on guided tours but the usual parrot-like lectures are replaced by really interesting facts needed to make the visit a memorable one. Admission is charged and all profits are used for the general purposes of the projects which are owned and operated by non-profit corporations.

Summer in Europe Yields Treasures

Officials of the Art Institute of Chicago have returned to Chicago following ten weeks spent in England and on the Continent. A great 17th century Dutch painting, a rare book published in 1483, and a 1470 woodcut are among the treasures which Daniel Catton Rich, director of the Institute; Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Tiffany Blake, members of the advisory committee of the department of prints and drawings, and Carl O. Schniewind, curator of prints and drawings, purchased on the trip.

These officials found the past season a significant time to visit abroad, since noteworthy collections have been rapidly changing hands, and important works of art in the paintings, sculpture, and drawing fields, in particular, are coming upon the market.

They made arrangements to have several works of art sent to Chicago to be studied at leisure by experts on the Institute staff, with a view to their purchase for the Institute's collection.

The 17th century Dutch painting, thought to be the greatest by Jacob van Ruisdael, "Ruin of Egmont," was purchased in London. The print department was made richer by a complete copy in perfect condition of a book published in Ulm, Germany, July 26, 1483. One of only five such copies known today, it contains 135 woodcut illustrations of religious subjects.

A hand colored woodcut from Germany made around 1470 is another acquisition made on this trip which will be treasured for its historic and artistic value.

A high spot of the trip for Mr. Rich was a visit to the author and art connoisseur, Bernard Berenson, whose villa near Florence, Italy, escaped war damage. The 82-year old scholar is working on his last book, which deals with the esthetics of Italian painting. Mr. Berenson revealed to Mr. Rich that his painting and sculpture collection and library of 50,000 volumes, as well as his superb villa, have been willed to Harvard University.

State Fair Furthers Local Art

Heretofore state fairs have concentrated their interest for the most part upon agricultural and industrial exhibits. But this fall, the Illinois State Fair commission displayed an unusual art exhibit of original oil paintings, water colors, prints, ceramics and sculpture by professional artists from states in the Old Northwest Territory, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Illinois, during Fair week held in August. A variety of prizes, totalling $2,900, were awarded.

Smithsonian Appointment

The Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., announces the appointment of Thomas M. Beggs, for the past 20 years the head of the art department of Pomona College, Claremont, Calif., to the newly created position of Assistant Director of the National Collection of Fine Arts.

Mr. Beggs was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., studied at Pratt Institute, and graduated in 1924 from the Yale Art School with the degree B. F. A. and with honors in mural decoration. He furthered his art training in France at l'Ecole Americaine des Beaux Arts, Fontainebleau. In 1925-26 he worked in Miami, Fla., on mural decorations. In 1926 he was called to Pomona College to take charge of the art department. His work will be found in the Miami Reality Board Building, in Redlands University, and in the Chinese Legation at Los Angeles, but he has devoted his time almost exclusively to improving the art course in Pomona College.

He is a member of the American Association of University Professors, the School Art League of New York, the American Federation of Arts, and the Museum of Modern Art of New York, the American Artists Professional League, Los Angeles Chapter, and the Western College Art Association, which he served as president in 1946-47. In 1941 he served on the Board of Directors of the California Art Club.

Old Automobiles, Bicycles, and Vehicles.

"Step-Lively" Era

D. TUDOR HARRELL

"So call a coach and let a coach be called;
And let the man who calleth be the caller
And in the calling, let him nothing call
But coach! coach! O for a coach, ye gods!

Henry Carey-Chrononhat

The sedan-cart for one horse of the year 1720, is considered the forerunner of all British single vehicles.

oOo

In 1723 the Pennsylvania colony established a ferry across the Schuylkill River between Philadelphia and New York, and the fare for coach or chariot (4-wheeled vehicle with body entirely enclosed) was one shilling. A chaise (4 wheels), was six pence; a cart or wagon with load, one shilling; without, six pence; and a sled, loaded or not, was one penny.

oOo

Josiah Wedgwood, 1730 - 1795 (father of British potters), did much for road improvement and traveling conditions in his native country.

oOo

The private coach, exclusive property of the wealthy, was fashionable and elegant. Pepy's diary tells of riding in his silver coach with gilt standards, the horse's manes tied with red ribbons and coachmen garbed in green livery with green reins in their hands. Records show that in October, 1754, the Master of Lellessing (George Nidd) and his lady in their sedan chairs set out for No. 60, St. Martin's Lane, to the show rooms of Thomas Chippendale, cabinet maker.

oOo

In 1770, we find one Jerry Brent-ham setting out with a Mr. Clark in his "Titiwhiskey."

oOo

Landaus first appeared in 1757 in the town of the same name in Germany. These were like a coach, except the upper part opened.

WEST VIRGINIA auto license plates pre 1912.—Titus, 1434 York, Philadelphia 32, Penna. mh6573

By the year 1761, Philadelphia had 38 wheeled vehicles, two landaus, three coaches, 15 chaises, and 18 chariots. By 1772 this number had increased to 84, and by 1794 there were 827.

oOo

The "high flier" gave a thrilling ride. This was a four-wheeled phaeton, with light body, and seat hoisted as much as 12 feet above the ground. The body rested on thin iron braces, and this was the sporting vehicle in 1760.

oOo

1769, the steam carriage of Nicholas Joseph Cugnot, came lumbering down the road of Versailles. This was the same year Watt took out his first patent. Cugnot's military tractor, was a three-wheeler with a round copper boiler in front like a steam kettle. This was connected by pipes with two cylinders over the single front wheel. Only 15 minutes steam could be generated at one time and its speed on the highway was three miles per hour. However due to difficulty in steering this voiture came to a tragic end while rounding a corner. It overturned and scalded some bystanders. France then banned steam engines from the roads and streets, as too dangerous to run.

oOo

After the first balloon ascension by Montgolfier Brothers of France, the "balloon" coach appeared. This was 1786. In France, under Louis XVI the "carabas" and "coucou" styles of public coaches with wooden tops and bather curtains became popular.

oOo

The "brouette" a one-passenger, two-wheeled vehicle drawn by man power came and vanished in 1770.

oOo

The French Chaise, 1760, a one-horse carriage for two persons, with its body hung on long leather straps and having long elastic shafts, a calash top and two high wheels could well be the subject of the following:

"Very nice four-wheeled chaise sir—seat for two behind, one in front for gentleman that drives."

THE AUTO NEWS of 1904

From Horseless Age, August, 1904

The officials of the Brooklyn Ferry Co., recently issued an order that automobiles should not be pushed on-to or off any of the ferries of the company. Motorists using these ferries are now obliged to have their cars hauled on and off by horses.

oOo

A rawhide whip is the latest means employed to bring automobilists to a stop. A woman in a farm wagon recently threatened a party of Co-shocton, Ohio, motorists with an application of the weapon if they attempted to pass her horses.

oOo

Thomas C. Berry, of San Francisco, was recently arrested and fined $25 for driving a motor car in San Rafael after sundown. He has appealed to the Supreme Court and proposes to fight the case to a finish. The constable who made the arrest fired several shots before the car stopped.

oOo

W. B. Littleton, of Hagerstown, Md., had a toll gate experience lately. When the keeper on the Hagerstown and Boonboro Pike had refused to permit him to pass through the gate in his car on the payment of six cents, the charge for a single horse and buggy, Mr. Littleton broke the lock on the gate and drove through. The keeper insisted that the charge should be twelve cents. He says that he intends to make a test case of the matter if the turnpike company carries it to court.

oOo

Ransom E. Olds, of Oldsmobile fame, has organized a new company for the manufacture of automobiles. It is to be known as the R. E. Olds Co., and is capitalized at $1,000,000. Mr. Olds is president; Reuben Shetler, vice-president; and Edward F. Seer, secretary and treasurer. A factory is to be erected in Lansing, Mich., capable of accommodating 900 to 1,000 hands, and the new cars, which are of Mr. Olds' latest design, will be ready for the market early in 1905.

oOo

The automobile licensing ordinance in Detroit, which requires all resident owners and non-resident owners who stay in the city longer than two days to register their machines with the city license collector, went into effect on December 1, 1903. From that date to Thursday, August 25, 1,015 licenses were issued. During the month of May, 139 licenses were issued, or an average of 4.5 per day. During July the number was 75 or about 2.5 per day, and from August 1 to August 25 inclusive, 74, or about 3 a day. Most all of the licenses are issued to residents of the city, which has about 300,000 inhabitants with its suburbs.

A Book For Every Record Collector

METROPOLITAN OPERA ANNALS, A Chronicle of Artists and Performances, compiled by William H. Seltsam, with an Introduction by Edward Johnson. The H. W. Wilson Company, New York, in Association with The Metropolitan Opera Guild. 751 pages, price $7.00.

Here is a book that every one who is interested in knowing what was sung by whom and when, or who sang what and when, during the entire history of the Metropolitan Opera, from its first season in 1883-84 right on up through 1946-47, will want to keep within easy reach for the rest of his life. To all students of operatic performance and particularly to collectors of historical vocal recordings, its value is incalculable, for on its 751 pages (3 columns to the page) will be found a complete chronological record of every performance given in the Metropolitan Opera House by the resident company during the past 64 years. Moreover, there is an Index which should prove especially helpful to record collectors and to others whose chief interest lies in the activities of the individual singers, because it lists in alphabetical order the names of all the artists who have sung at the Metropolitan and states which season or seasons they were members of the company. Thus, it takes only a glance to discover exactly when the most obscure vocalist appeared and then only a moment more to see in which operas and roles and on which dates he sang. The Index also includes names of all operas and ballets that have been staged in the Metropolitan.

At the beginning of each season's program listings, the entire personnel for that year is given. Then comes the name, date of performance and cast of every opera performed during the season. In the case of operas performed more than once, only variations in casting are noted; otherwise the name of the opera is simply listed with a note to the effect that the cast was the same as on the date of the opera's first performance that season. Programs of the famous Sunday Night Concerts are also reproduced. Following each season's program listings, is a page (or more) of excerpts from contemporary press reviews. Needless to say, these news-file, paper criticisms add much to the fascination and usefulness of the book.

Now for what Mr. Seltsam's magnificent compendium does not include. Not listed are the activities of companies which leased the house for special performance or supplementary seasons; the performances given by the Metropolitan Company in the New Theatre in 1909, and all out-of-town performances. Thus the Henry Abbey season of 1887, starring Adeline Patti, the Abbey-Grau season of March-April, 1890, the Damrosch seasons of 1895-98, and the visits of the Chicago-Philadelphia companies are all omitted. These omissions are certainly regrettable, but they are also understandable, for a larger volume than this might have been impossible to publish in this period of costly production. In any case, since Mr. Seltsam, his publisher, and The Metropolitan Opera Guild have gone this far, it is to be hoped that they will eventually offer us another volume of annals covering everything that had to be left out of this one. Such a project would be difficult and tedious to carry out, but extremely worthwhile.

No review of Metropolitan Opera Annals would be complete without mention of the only other book which can be compared with it in any way, i. e. Irving Kolodin's The Metropolitan Opera, 1883-1935. This was never intended to be a full or definitive record of Metropolitan performances, and as a source of factual information it frequently proved to be disappointing and inaccurate, though nonetheless very helpful. But now that Seltsam's complete compendium has been published, Kolodin's book becomes what it should have been all along—a delightful supplementary volume that makes good reading as a companion work to the factual Metropolitan Opera Annals.

The source material for Metropolitan Opera Annals was exceedingly difficult to obtain. Newspaper reviews were usually unsatisfactory and often unreliable for changes in casting etc.; public library collections of printed programs were incomplete; even the Metropolitan's own program access, was not without gaps. Thus, to have all this information within the covers of one volume is really a tremendous boon to all of us, and we owe sincere thanks to William H. Seltsam for undertaking such a laborious piece of research, with its hours of tiresome copying, tedious checking and rechecking, typing, proof-reading etc., and our congratulations, too, for doing such a fine job of it all. As most of our readers know, Mr. Seltsam is the founder and secretary of The International Record Collector's Club of Bridgeport, Conn., whose re-issues of historical vocal recordings have been mentioned so often in this department. Incidentally, Mr. Seltsam did most of the work on Metropolitan Opera Annals during the period when his Club's record issuing activities were held up as a result of war time shellac shortage.

Another Namara Record

Six Iberian Folk-songs, collected and sung to her own pianoforte accompaniment, by Marguerite Namara. Housed in special envelope decorated by Natalie Hays Hammond, price $2.50. Martin Records, 23 W. 68th Street, New York, N. Y.

Marguerite Namara's first electrical recording (IRCC No. 239), which was reviewed in the May, 1947, issue of this magazine, caused such a stir of excitement and approval among connoisseurs of unusual vocal recordings that this new example of her extraordinary work in the field of Spanish folk-songs is sure to win an enthusiastic reception. While listening to it, one is impressed anew with the singer's remarkable powers as a vocalist and self-accompanist. Again one wonders how an American-born soprano manages to imbue her voice with such a completely convincing Spanishness of color. And just listen to the exciting rhythm and guitar-like tone she draws from the piano! All this, mind you, is but one facet of the art of this amazing woman who can also interpret the songs of Debussy, Satie and others as though she were a native of France.

As recorded on this opaque red vinylite disc, Namara's naturally brilliant voice may sound a trifle overbrilliant on some machines, requiring adjustment of the treble control; otherwise the reproduction is well up to the latest standards of studio recording. For the most immediate listening appeal, I recommend the middle song on each side, that is, songs No. 2 and No. 5. One of these, a song without words, is sung in mezzo-like "chest" tones that are all the more striking to those who are familiar with this artist's accomplishments as a high soprano.

FAVORITE PIONEER RECORDING ARTISTS

EUGENE C. ROSE. II

By ULYSSES (JIM) WALSH

Eugene Rose, the accomplished virtuoso of flute, piccolo and ocarina, was, he says, "a real phonograph enthusiast" in the days when he was playing for the Edison company. When a son was born to him and Mrs. Rose at 6 A. M., September 21, 1906, the proud father got out his big Edison Concert cylinder machine as soon as the nurse brought the baby in for him to see. Then he put on a recording blank and "immortalized" the youngster's first cries. That done, he took the record down to the Edison laboratories and boasted that he had discovered a new singer!

Besides doing all sorts of recorded orchestral work, Mr. Rose helped to play musical accompaniments for the talking pictures which Thomas A. Edison introduced, through a combination of phonograph and film, around 1912. He says it was an ordeal performing for those primitive talkies in blistering summer weather with 36 big arc lights burning overhead, and is full of amusing anecdotes of the difficulties experienced in making the films and records synchronize. Sometimes, for instance, a dog would be barking, but the barking sound wouldn't be heard until a little later.

Mr. Rose played in the Metropolitan Opera orchestra from 1911 to 1917, and with all of Fred Stone's shows at the Globe theatre in New York, beginning in 1914 with "Chin-Chin," and continuing through 1929 with "Three Cheers." In the latter, he recalls, Will Rogers "pinch hit" for Stone, who had been hurt in an airplane accident. Rogers, himself, was killed in a plane crash in 1935.

After the flautist, or flutist, if you prefer, left Edison, he played as a free-lance in the orchestras of perhaps a score of other phonograph companies. During recent years he has done considerable teaching.

And now we come to a really unusual incident. In October last year, a month or so after I saw Mr. Rose at John Bielings' home, L. Brevort Odell, of Brooklyn, who has one of the largest collections in the world of cylinder phonographs and records, announced in the New York Daily News that he would like to give three of the instruments to persons who would appreciate them and would present a hundred records with each.

Mr. Rose's son, Robert V. Rose, of Freeport, was one of those who applied to benefit by Mr. Odell's generosity. He received the following interesting postal card, which Mr. Rose has given me permission to quote:

"Dear Mr. Rose: It will be a pleasure to give you one of the phonographs we offered through the News, and I am sure there is at least one solo by Eugene Rose among the records. This is a preliminary note and shall write you soon to make arrangements. Please tell your father his playing has given us pleasure for many years."

The card was written on October 19. On October 21 Mr. Odell wrote the following equally interesting letter:

"Dear Mr. Rose: Hundreds of letters were received in response to our offer in the News and I wish it had been possible to give to many seemingly worthy applicants. We increased the number of outfits to five, but at present that is the limit.

"Your letter especially interested me, for so many of the instrumentalists have been forgotten. Everyone remembers Billy Murray, Jones, Collins, etc., but apparently the band men just represent a cornet, a fiddle, a piano, etc., and few collectors regard their records at all. In my case, I have always taken my greatest pleasure from instrumental music, so to hear about Eugene Rose was a pleasant surprise.

"Just a few days ago, my good friend, John Norton, who runs the unique Woodymay Record company, in Boston, and ourselves were mentioning Mr. Rose's flute solo, 'La Traviata Concert Waltz,' as being one of the best such recordings ever made.

"I presume you know your dad also played the 'musical sweet potato.' Well, you'll hear him get really sweet music out of the ocarina!

"Please let me know when you can call for the machine. . . Another outfit is going to the son of Dan Quinn, the singer, and another to Billy 'Musical' Huehn, old-time troupier and associate of early recording artists.

"John Young, who sang as 'Harry Anthony,' often visits us and hears his fine recordings."

The "sweet potato" record to which the generous Mr. Odell referred of course was the "Genevieve Waltz Medley" mentioned in last month's installment. The younger Rose took the instrument to Freeport and played "Genevieve" for his father — and 'Gene' in turn called John Bieling on the 'phone and played the record for him.

The Odell letter brings out one interesting point. As he says, the old-time instrumentalists have been largely overshadowed by the fame of the singers who made records at the same time. Of course, it was easier for a voice to convey the individual artist's personality in those days than it was for a flute or a cornet to make a similarly indelible impression. It happens that Eugene Rose is the first instrumentalist of whom I have written a biographical sketch during the nearly six years that I have been doing the Favorite Pioneer Recording Artists series for HOBBIES. Others, such as Vess Ossman, "the Banjo King," and Charles D'Almaine, the violinist, will be dealt with later, but Mr. Rose breaks the ice for the instrumentalists, just as Ada Jones did for the women singers.

And I'm very glad indeed that I've had the opportunity of paying tribute to a fine musician, who has vigor and alertness that would do credit to a man twenty or thirty years his junior. Eugene Rose is a most attractive and likable gentleman. As I write this sketch on a warm night in July, I'm hoping that I shall be going to New York about two months from now, and that while I'm on Long Island, I shall meet Mr. Rose again and hear more of his inimitable reminiscences of the old days when the cylinder phonograph with the morning glory horn was the ultimate in home entertainment.

DOLL-LOGY

NEW YORK COLLECTION

Another collector who traverses the whole field in search of dolls to add to her assemblage, which already consist of 500 is Anna Glassman of Rockville Center, N. Y. Mrs. Glassman does not settle for anything specific, such as foreign, but takes in all types.

Recently she and her daughter Doris stopped off at HOBBIES office for a chat while they were enroute to California, and the editorial staff was treated to pictures of the many different varieties in the collection.

This collection contains many of the well known character and portrait dolls which are so popular today with collectors. In this group are examples such as George and Martha Washington, made by a United States doll artist.

An exceptionally interesting group consists of a representation of Indians, greeting Columbus, with a boat model in the background. These dolls, made of dried apples, are very realistic.

The grandma and grandpa dolls are appealing. Grandma, bespectacled, has a basket of yarn in her lap, and the look of repose on her face shows her to be happy at her task. Grandpa sits with a miniature pipe in his mouth, and it appears that his reminiscences are pleasing.

Doll groups which depict scenes from books or historical scenes are always of interest and value. A group of four Creche specimens consist of a troubador announcing the birth of Christ, while three peasant type dolls look on. Costumes are of the period.

An Ideal in Dollology

Mrs. Winnie Gage, California dollologist, has a good idea that others might like to indulge those who are near and dear to them. One of Mrs. Gage's friends is being married and she is dressing a manikin doll as a memento of the occasion. The clothing of the doll is in exact duplication of the bride's wedding dress and veil. Undoubtedly, this gift will be cherished throughout the recipient's entire life.

BLANCHE SWINK

Autographs

SIGNATURES

By LEONE LIGHTNER

Collecting autographs of celebrities on a linen table cloth is the hobby of Aline Marfield of Wichita, Kas. Starting that hobby in the fall of 1944, she now has 77 names written on the imported Irish linen cloth and worked in brown thread.

Fritz Kreisler, who signed his name when he was in Wichita in concert this spring said, "I see you would have quite an orchestra if you had all of these musicians together. Yes, it would be a fine orchestra". The noted violinist seemed to enjoy reading the names of acquaintances and friends.

Kreisler long had been an ideal of Mrs. Marfield. Her brother, Gordon Martin, now with the Associated Press in Santa Fe, N. M., won a violin contest when a student in the Emporia, Kas., schools and was given a picture of Kreisler. Getting the autograph of the famous violinist was a high spot in her experience with her hobby.

Since she and her husband, Al Marfield, formerly comprised a dance team, they had many contacts which enabled her to secure signatures. Marfield was a pilot with the army air forces during the war and since receiving his discharge, the couple has resided in Wichita.

Her first autograph was Harry James, orchestra leader. Since then she has added many names, some world famous.

One of the prized signatures is that of Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright. There are two producers, Cecil B. DeMille of Hollywood and John Wildberg of New York, whose signatures were secured. Signature of one author, W. H. White, is found and that of one governor, Andrew Schoepfel, former Kansas governor.

Thurlow Lieurance of Wichita, when asked to sign, said if it was for a hobby he would be glad to cooperate. In addition, the composer drew two bars of "Moon Deer" which at the time he had just completed.

Several others drew bars of music, including Percy Grainger, Sigmund Romberg and Evelyn of the Phil Spitalney orchestra.

Sketches which accompany some of the names are interesting. Harry Blackstone, the magician, drew himself in a serious mood. Leo Carillo sketched himself in his role in "The Bad Man". Zazu Pitts made a humorous likeness of herself. Frank Versace, flutist with Lily Pons, sketched himself with his flute.

Mae West, who wrote the largest signature on the cloth, added her well known "Come Up and See Me Sometime". Miss West was appearing on a program of a national organization of theatre owners and exhibitors in Cincinnati where the Marfields danced, when her name was added.

Eugene Goossens, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony are among the signers. A Kansas orchestra, the Wichita Symphony, is represented by Orien Dalley.

In addition to Kreisler, three well known violinists appear. Yehudi Menuhin, Albert Spalding, and Rubinoff and his violin. William Primrose, violist and Galla-Rini, accordionist, are represented.

Several opera stars are included, Marian Anderson, Ezio Pinza, James Melton, Lily Pons, Jeannette MacDonald, Bidu Sayoa, John Brownlee, Ferruccio Tagliavini, Salvatore Baccaloni and Richard Tucker. Miss MacDonald wrote her name after singing in "Faust" in Chicago.

Mrs. Marfield almost missed getting the name of Oscar Levant. His manager had declined to ask him to sign, when the pianist played at the Forum in Wichita. But no taxi was available to take them to the train and after accepting the Marfield's offer for a ride, the autograph was given. However, a taxi arrived before they had started.

Dancers have been favorites for signatures. Leonide Massine, ballet star and world famous choreographer, Alexandra Danilova and Frederick Franklin, Anton Dolin and Alicia Markowa, Veloz and Yolanda, and Bill Robinson may be found in the signatures.

Stars of stage and screen whose signatures were obtained, include Helen Hayes, Eugenie Leontovich, Lila Lee, Basil Rathbone, who turned out to be an interesting conversationalist, Una Merkel, John Hubbard and Wynne Gibson. Pauline Lord's signature was difficult to obtain. At first she refused, but Mrs. William Floto, wife of the Wichita promotion

"HUNTING CASE" BUTTONS

By DOROTHY FOSTER BROWN

These most elaborate specialized examples of the "Golden Age" button receive their name from their resemblance to the "Hunting Case" watches of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The intricate designs and delicate workmanship of the buttons are hardly inferior to those which characterize the watches.

I wish that I were able to give a brief account of the manufacture of Hunting Case buttons, but I have never attempted technical descriptions and I have neither the time nor the aptitude for such research. My interest in buttons lies principally in their less technical aspects—their artistic, historical and human interest side, if I may so describe it—and I feel that I will do well to stick to those aspects of buttons which most appeal to me, and not to attempt any excursions into mechanical fields, where I might easily lose my way. I am more than willing to let others discuss the processes of button manufacture, while I describe the results.

No. 1 is two-piece, flat with convex border, raised design. Reverse: "Superior Extra—Rich." (The self-satisfied slogans on the backs of some of these buttons might cause one to smile, if they were not so patently deserved!) This brass button lacks the fine, overall engraving which characterizes most Hunting Case buttons.

No. 2 is gilt, two-piece, flat, with convex border and raised ring between border and face. Raised design and all-over engraving. Reverse: "Benedict & Burnham—Extra." c. 1840.

No. 3—Simpler and less ornate than some, this button still belongs to the Hunting Case group. Two-piece, flat with convex border. Reverse: "Eaves & Sons—Wolcottville." *

No. 4 is an English button, of about the same period as its American-made companions, and of even finer workmanship. Gilt, flat and two-piece, it was worn on the wedding coat of James Mortimore, about the year 1840. Mr. Mortimore was regimental tailor to a British regiment stationed in London, and his button came to me through the kindness of his great-grand-daughter, now resident in Canada. How astonished Mr. Mortimore (and many other original owners of buttons) would be, if they knew how their once taken-for-granted buttons are now collected and treasured! Reverse: "G. & W. Boggett & Co.—St. Martin's Lane — London."

No. 5—This graceful Oriental pattern, so delicately engraved, is even more charming, to my way of thinking, than more florid designs like Nos. 6 and 7. Gilt, flat, two-piece. Reverse: "R. & W. Robinson—Extra Rich." 1836-43. *

No. 6 displays all the characteristics of the Hunting Case button: the flat face, convex border and intricate raised design, with fine, all-over decoration. Gilt, two-piece. Reverse: "R. & W. Robinson—Extra Rich." 1836-43.

No. 7 is not unlike No. 6 in its general characteristics: gilt, two-piece, with flat face, raised design and convex border. Reverse: "Rich Orange Color-Gilt." *

Dignified, distinguished and elegantly restrained, these are the polished aristocrats among brass and gilt buttons, always impeccably correct and graceful. They are the "last word" of their type, and no buttons of recent manufacture, however expensive or elaborate, can compare with them in beauty and distinction.

HUNTING CASE BUTTONS

HUNTING CASE BUTTONS ADDENDA

By GRACE C. ERWIN

The term "Hunting Case" when applied to a button strikes me as a misnomer. A true Hunting Case watch had a metal cover to protect the face of the watch from damage due to moisture or dropping it. As far as I know there are not any buttons with covers. However, the designs on Hunting Case buttons were incor- porated from similar designs on early watches. This fact is very in- teresting, particularly as the 1840- 1850 era (when these buttons were first known) was a period of ele- gance. One can readily believe that the dandies of that time had sets of buttons designed from the watches they carried. How very fortunate for us that mimicry has produced a type of button that will doubtless be pre- served for many more years.

One of the varieties of Hunting Case buttons has considerable damaskening on its surface in the form of overlapping circles—the whole showing some iridescence. A careful study of one of the Henry Clay buttons shows this work be- neath his likeness. I am indebted to Pierre Dumaine of the Waltham Watch Company for the following in- formation relative to damaskening as it appears on Hunting Case but- tons.

Damaskening takes the place of the very elaborate casing and "grill" work done on watches made as early as the year 1500. This damaskening work, now machined turned, was done first to satisfy the desire of watch owners who wanted elaborate designs on their time pieces.

It has been suggested by a friend that if you want to find a Hunting Case watch a likely place to look would be Maine. There is no guaran- tee that buttons of the same type will be found readily. When a lucky col- lector locates one, he will no doubt have a button of the finest workman- ship and lasting satisfaction.

GOLD BUTTONS OF ANCIENT GREECE

By THELMA SHULL

There is a magic spell woven around the old Grecian cities that were described in Homer's magnificent epic. Because of one man's belief in the reality of this heroic narrative, the culture of the world was greatly enriched.

In 1876 near the Turkish hamlet of Hissarlik a German merchant, Dr. Heinrich Schliemann, found beneath the earth's surface the ruins of the ancient city of Mycenae. It had been an important stronghold, for it was situated on a hill commanding all the roads leading from Corinth and Achaea into the Argive plain. Dr. Schliemann was a devoted student of ancient Greece, and used his immense fortune to finance the excavations of several early Grecian cities. The great treasure-trove which he found in the graves at Mycenae consisted of articles of gold, silver, bronze, ivory, and stone, and included the beautiful and costly buttons which are illustrated here.

Large copper vessels, filled with buttons and jewelry of gold, were found at a depth of twenty-six and one-half feet below the earth's surface. Most of the gold buttons were made over wooden foundations having on them exactly the same beautiful ornamentation as the gold covering. It is presumed that the wooden buttons were first carved with the desired design in low relief. The gold plate was laid over this and securely attached on the reverse side. Then the gold covering was hammered, thus bringing out in the thin sheet of metal the pattern carved on the wooden mold beneath. After this had been affected, an intaglio design was made in the gold plate.

Notice the interesting repetitive detail on the buttons. In the first tomb three hundred and forty buttons were found, from most of which the wooden mold had disappeared. Eighty-four were plain, without ornamentation, and varied in size from two inches in diameter to one inch or less. The remaining two hundred and fifty-six were ornamented with floral patterns, perforations, concentric circles, and triangles.

Unusually large buttons, obviously for decoration, were shaped like a cross or lozenge. The largest of these measured three and one-half inches in length and two and one-eighth inches across. They were adorned with concentric circles, spirals, tree branches, tiny crosses, flowers, etc. An example of this type is pictured in the center of plate I.

The larger round buttons (see plate II.) were enriched with intaglio designs of stars, crosses, flowers, and spirals. The repetition of the geometric motifs is beautifully done, and any of these buttons would be considered smartly styled for today's gowns. Most of these still retained their wooden back, shaped like a shirt-stud; some had only flat pieces of wood; and on a portion of the one hundred thirty buttons this size the wood had completely disappeared and the gold plate alone remained.

Also found by Dr. Schliemann were eight very large round buttons which measured nearly two inches in diameter and had designs of the sun and its rays combined with a spiral pattern.

Dr. Heinrich Schliemann, to whom the world owes its appreciation for these discoveries, was a poor young man until he was twenty-four years of age. At that time he was sent to Russia by his employers and began a prosperous career for himself. He made his fortune in indigo. He had an insatiable thirst for knowledge, and taught himself to speak and write in English, French, Dutch, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Russian, Swedish, Polish, Arabic, and ancient and modern Greek. The languages proved of inestimable benefit to him in his international business dealings and the background for his knowledge of the Homeric sites. In 1850 he was living in California and became a citizen of the United States. Later he lived for some time in Indianapolis. He traveled all over the world. His second wife was a Grecian woman many years his junior in age, who was, nevertheless, imbued with the same zeal as her husband for finding and excavating the ancient cities of Trov. Tirvns and Mycenae.

No doubt these gold buttons which they found have proven of use to many designers during the 71 years which have ensued since they were presented to modern civilization. To button collectors they give the sense of security that comes from a realization that their hobby is steeped in antiquity, for buttons were among man's first necessities of dress.

Button Booklet

One of the latest books on the button scene is "How to Make and Sell Button Jewelry," by Earl H. Sincerbox, Wassaic, New York. It goes to prove again that there many ramifications to collecting and particularly to button collecting.

The Sincerboxes, collectors and dealers, say that the book is an outgrowth of numerous letters they received on how to make button jewelry. Mr. Sincerbox's experience as a vocational teacher stood him in good stead in this instance. This booklet seems to have completely covered its subject and it would seem would have a great appeal to most button collectors, and particularly the distaff members of the hobby, who like to turn suitable surplus button into becoming ear-rings, pendants, rings and pins.

BUTTON BRIEFS

Buttons of precious metals were worn by the rich from the second half of the 14th century when tight-fitting garments replaced the earlier loose robes. In the 16th century buttons were often enamelled; in the inventory of Mary Queen of Scots there is an item of four hundred and four enamelled buttons, each with a ruby in the center.

Mrs. Erwina Couse who lived in Florida advises that the salt air in Florida is very hard on metal buttons and is liable to cause rust. The way to get around that is to lacquer the metal parts of the buttons and keep them in a tray covered with cellophane and air-proof as much as possible. In this way the buttons will last indefinitely without deterioration.

ARTISTRY IN RUGS

By ELAINE ALLEN

Few people in this country have made a hobby of collecting antique oriental rugs because of the great expense and trouble in finding and purchasing rare specimens. But Sarkis H. Nahigian, Chicago rug dealer, has built up one of the finest collections in the world since his arrival in America from Armenia fifty-six years ago.

When Nahigian immigrated in 1891 he brought with him a few carpets which he sold to obtain living expenses. They brought such a good price that he continued buying and selling, thus beginning his life work.

In his dealings with precious antiques, he set aside a few here and there which he couldn't bring himself to part with, and soon he had amassed a private collection that has been exhibited at the World's Fair in Chicago, and in galleries, museums and art institutes throughout the United States.

Rare Persian specimens from the 16th and 17th centuries, Caucasian dragon rugs, Turkish medallion rugs, silk-woven animal rugs—these are a few of the examples in his collection. Their weaves bring out the rich maroons and reds, the deep blues and golds, the delicate green and ivory tints that have endured and mellowed through the centuries.

In his later years he traveled through America, Europe and Asia, gathering data on the whereabouts of antique rugs through agents in rug-weaving countries who contacted him when an important discovery was made. Nahigian himself traveled to obscure towns in Asia Minor, going from house to house, from hut to hut, looking for additions to his collection in native dwellings where rugs were kept for generations regardless of their condition.

On one of his trips to Turkey he met a native leading a donkey covered with a dilapidated and filthy rug. He stopped the man, examined the rug and decided to purchase it to see what it was like beneath the dirt. The native thought he was crazy and told him so but he paid for the rug and had it cleaned. It turned out to be one of the most exquisite finds he had made.

Nahigian's rug enterprises have been the cause of many wealthy businessmen taking up antique oriental rug collecting as a hobby. One day a rug in the display window of his store in St. Louis attracted the eye of James Ballard, patent medicine millionaire.

Ballard bought the rug and became so fascinated by it that he sank a fortune into his own collection, becoming one of the few great rug fanciers in the United States. He, too, scoured the Orient looking for specimens. On one of his antique-hunting trips, he was bitten by a poisonous tropical insect and never recovered. His collection was donated to the St. Louis art museum and the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

Nahigian has the largest silk rug collection in the world, one of which is insured for $100,000. It is a rare garden silk rug of the early 18th century and measures ten feet by fourteen feet. He also owns the largest wool rug in the world, fifty feet long and thirty feet wide. It was woven for a shrine in Meshed, great mosque city in Eastern Persia.

But his most precious possession is a pure silk rug, 2½ inches long and 2 inches wide (the smallest silk rug in the world) woven for him by a nine-year girl in an orphanage in Harpoot, Armenia, his birthplace, in gratitude for his donations to the orphanage.

It has over 1000 hand-tied knots to the square inch. He keeps it framed in glass on his desk and would not part with it for any of three large sums he was offered for it. Its value to him is more than that of a work of art.

One of the most important items in his collection is a 17th century Persian floral rug, woven during the reign of Shah Abbas, Persia's famous patron of the arts. Rugs woven during this period are called Isfahan, named after the Shah's capital city in central Persia.

Shah Abbas had many courts throughout Persia, all located in great rug centers where his interest in rug weaving brought forth the lotus flower design, different from the conventional medallion, used up to that time.

He was the first Persian ruler to exchange ambassadors with the western countries. Many of the rugs from his royal looms were sent as gifts to the kings and emperors of the West and some still hang in the cathedrals and palaces to which they were sent.

Persia taught the world how to make rugs. Though the art originated with the nomadic shepherd tribes of early civilization, Persian rulers encouraged artists to create masterpieces for their palaces, masterpieces that, with their creators, circulated over Asia and greatly influenced rug weaving techniques and designs in those countries.

One of the most famous Persian rugs in existence today is a medallion carpet from the Mosque of Ardabil in Tabriz, Persia. It was woven with a twin in the 16th century to decorate the burial place of two shahs of Persia.

Shah Ismail, who ruled in 1502, furnished his courtrooms on a scale of magnificence unconceived in those days. Leading designers, painters, rug weavers and artists were brought to the court and applied their arts to beautify his palace.

When he died, he was buried in the Mosque of Shaikh Saufi, an ancestor and former shah. Ismail's son, Shah Tasmasp, hired one of the most famous designers of the court, Maksud of Keshan, to design and weave identical carpets for the Mosque in memory of the great treasures the two shahs had made possible.

The rugs were woven of the finest silk and wool yarn available and were rich blue with an intricate medallion pattern in varicolored shades of red and ivory. They measured 34½ feet long and 17½ feet wide. At the top of the rugs under the upper border was woven a quotation from Hafiz, Persia's greatest lyric poet.

"I have no refuge in this world other than thy threshold.
There is no protection for my head other than this doorway."

It was signed, "The work of the slave of this holy place, Maksud of Keshan."

In the 19th century the rugs were taken from their resting place and sold to obtain money for repairs to the Mosque. Both carpets were in bad condition so workers in Tabriz repaired one carpet with parts of the other and sold it to the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

Its mate, recently on exhibition at the Art Institute in Chicago, is missing the outside border and parts of the corners. Otherwise the rug shows no scars from its dismemberment. It is the property of J. Paul Getty of California, well-known antique rug collector.

The first Turkish courts were decorated predominately by Persian artists, this trend reaching its height during the reign of Suleiman the Great.

In India the Persian method was introduced when Emperor Akbar in the 16th century imported designers, dyers and weavers to decorate his court.

Persia has always been known for her artistic and poetic temperament, especially in the decorative arts. The Persian love of nature was naturally absorbed by one of her main artistic manifestations — rug designing.

For instance, the nightingale and rose appear frequently in rug patterns, inspired by numerous references to them in Persian poetry where the nightingale sings the praises of the rose for its beauty and fragrance.

Some Persian rugs show animals in the pattern work. They are often battling in pairs, denoting the struggle between good and evil, light and darkness, enlightenment and ignorance; virtue always overcoming vice.

The henna flower became a rug pattern after centuries of oriental women tinted their hair and fingernails with its dye and men in high religious offices tinted their grey beards for dignity.

The ever-green cypress tree symbolizes immortality for the Mohammedan, which not only explains its use in carpet patterns but also explains the scarcity of green in oriental rugs, since they are used underfoot.

The Nahigian collection provides many examples of these rug designs. Intricate patterns blend with color while color in turn complements design, making a harmonious whole. It is this blend of elements that has made the antique oriental carpet so valuable an acquisition and so absorbing an avocation.

Mrs. Willis Tilton of Kansas, who collects buckles, could not resist adding this Grecian specimen to her collection.

FROM A COLLECTION OF BUCKLES

Mrs. Willis Tilton of Kansas is never in want of a buckle to dress up her latest costume. Her hobby is buckles, and at the last count she had more than 4000 to choose from.

"I never believed that buckles could be so interesting," she admitted. "Buckles depicting mythology, children's story characters, historic events, and nature are legion."

Her oldest buckle, a Chinese bronze one, dates back to 200 B. C., says Mrs. Tilton. She has a handclasp buckle unique among buckles of the world. A pocketbook belt buckle dates back to 1879. A fire buckle of 1890 is in her collection.

The Colonial shoe buckles of Nathaniel Green came to her direct from his descendants. Another pair worn by Betsy Church, whose father helped assassinate King Philip, came to Mrs. Tilton from the third generation.

Army buckles of the Civil War showing thirteen stars and one of the Boxer Rebellion and another of French or English origin from Fort Louisburg are among her historic collection.

Mrs. Tilton has her buckles arranged according to subjects which include the fleur de lis, snake, animal, bird, lizard, Russian, cut steel and cloisonne designs.

SIGNATURES

agent, finally got the name, as she did in many cases of other stars appearing in Wichita.

Signatures of a number of pianists, Arthur Rubenstein, Eugene List, Jose Iturbi, Alec Templeton, and piano duos, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Niminoff, Arthur Whitmore and Jack Lowe appear on the tablecloth. Morton Downey the singer, Marty May and Harry Richmond of musical comedy and Gracie Fields, the English entertainer are listed.

Sports celebrities are not omitted. The names of Jack Dempsey, A. B. "Hap" Chandler, George Sisler and Ernie Quigley appear on the cloth.

Father Flanagan of Boy's Town has the smallest signature on the cloth, although it is legible enough to be read clearly, since Mrs. Marfield's mother, Mrs. A. D. Martin worked the name in brown thread.

Frank La Forge, accompanist of Lily Pons, disclosed he had a similar cloth and added he "wouldn't dream of letting anyone eat on it unless it had a glass over it," and he doubted if he would then.

When Thomas L. Thomas, the singer, signed the cloth, he was amazed that a person who had been in the theatrical world would be interested in collecting names of celebrities.

However, the cloth is not the only hobby of Mrs. Marfield. She has a collection of some 400 miniature bottles, fully catalogued and cased. She has started a collection of antique furniture, has over 25 dolls in a collection, each dressed to represent the period in which it was made. She has a group of Degas prints, all of which she or her husband brought from Europe.

In addition to these various hobbies, she teaches dancing at her own studio and works in the realty office of her husband and her father. She even finds time for horseback riding and ice skating. It is easy after all to see why she doesn't miss theater life too much, although her interest in it is still keen.

NEW INTERESTS IN OLD LAMPS

By DOROTHEA ANN DOZOIS

The scientific angles of lighting are the basis of interest around which I have built my collection.

My lamps represent a special interest in that they tell a portion of the story of man's great struggle in overcoming darkness. They include early Roman fat lamps, whale oil, camphene lamps, patented lamps, courting lamps, bedside lamps, twinkle lamps and premium lamps, bracket lamps and hanging lamps.

About the time of the Civil War period and shortly thereafter, lamps were selected from a salesman who traveled from town to countryside with his pack of wares. Lamps were in miniature form. The display must have been very colorful as well as enticing to the buyer. From the display rack, the housewife made her selection and in time she received her full size lamp. Some of the lamps in this group date to 1868-1870.

Then there were the premium lamps given by various companies which included Little Nutmeg, Little Butter cup, The Banner Improved (baking powder), The Handy, Little Gem, Little Joker, Duchess, Noxall, Little Harry, and others. The premium lamps came in a variety of clear and colored glass.

In the early 1850's when kerosene was first gaining in popularity, due to its highly inflammable nature, it was frequently dangerous. An interesting note is that many distillers dumped gasoline into the kerosene. At that time gasoline had little commercial value and was therefore considered a waste product to be utilized in any way possible. This may be one of the reasons for the many safety features developed in the early patent lamps.

The Downdraft lamp, made from imported English tin, is an example of one of the early patented lamps. Another one is a glass font with a double handle supposed to be safer in handling. It bears a patent date, 1868, on the bottom. The name Ripley is also inscribed on one. There was a rush for patents, and of course each designer was anxious to catch the public fancy by using unique shapes and safety features. The Glow Light is of a much later patent date, 1895. It was a night light and so constructed as not to tip.

The "Time Indicating" lamp is one that deserves mention. On the base of this blown glass lamp the words, "Grand Vals Pride of America," "Time and Light," are inscribed. It dates around 1868-1870, and I consider it one of the most unique of the patented lamps. When filled to the 8:00 P. M. level as indicated at the top, the lamp is ready for all night burning. Hour by hour as the lamp burns, the oil level falls to the hour mark indicated until it reaches 6:00 A. M. the last number. By this time the oil will have been used and the light gone out.

The Fairy lamps are a collector's pleasure. One that I enjoy because of its lovely coloring, amber top and clear glass bottom, is an "S. Clarke Fairy Pyramid" lamp. It was introduced at the London Exposition in 1862. The Fairy lamp is a candle burning lamp, the candle being a short round type which resembles a votive candle. Since they were made before heat resistant glass was developed, they were not practical. The top section cracked due to the light heat. They are decorative pieces to have because so many of them were made from lovely satin glass, pressed glass in colors, and fine porcelain.

Most of the lamps, in my collection are the kerosene oil burning type. Many are whale oil, fat, and camphene. Camphene and Vesta lamps are the same. Camphene is a rectified spirit of turpentine. They were not too practical due to the explosive nature of the fuel. That is the reason for the camphene lamp spout being longer than the spout on the whale oil lamp.

The Roman Fat lamp, carved from stone, deserves special mention. It consists of a small reservoir to hold the fat. Holes have been chiseled out for the woven cloth wick. Other wicks occasionally used were flax tow, rushes and vegetable fibers. It gave a small light.

A collection of Christmas lights which I use during the holidays makes an attractive window arrangement. They are of German origin, but American made. These are in the old-fashioned Christmas colors, red, green and white. The white is milk glass. They hang by chain, ribbon or string. Because they are shaped like the old fire buckets, they cannot stand. They have small floating wicks. This type of lamp is also known as a Float lamp. The base of the wick is cork, shaped like a tiny round disc. The wick itself is a cotton fiber saturated in tallow fat. They are placed in the water, and there they float about, twinkling out a light. Lantern shaped novelties were used also. They burned a regular Christmas candle. Mine is a paneled lantern light made of coated glass, dating about 1850. The four side walls consist of three different colors; amber, green and two cranberry panels. All Christmas lights give off a colorful glow when hung in a sunlit window. I decorate with evergreens to carry out the holiday theme.

Betty lamps came over with the Pilgrims in the Mayflower and were of Dutch origin. They are of iron, tin, and brass. They are small, shallow and shaped like a pear, but flat on the top and bottom. The earliest form was known as the open Betty or a slot lamp. Later came the Betty with a hinged lid. Improvements continued and stands were made for some Bettys; crude at first, but the appearance improved with better design. About 1680 a tinsmith in Newbury, Mass., began to manufacture Betty lamps. Until this time practically all lamps were imported.

The trickiest lamp I have is a tin collapsible one. I refer to it as the forerunner of the modern flash light. It is candle burning, with a holder for spare candles and matches. It bears the inscription "Minor's patent 1865." Because of their cheapness in construction they did not resist climatic conditions and rusted away. Therefore, a perfect lamp today is a collector's item. The panels were made from isinglass because of their indestructible nature. It was at this stage of my collecting that my husband took an interest in my hobby. He loves to show off this particular lamp.

I have a miniature railroad lamp from France that could tell interesting stories if it could talk. It is constructed of metal, will hang, stand, or may be hooked to the wall. The letters E. T. on the top of the lamp are abbreviations for ETTA, which stands for State Railroad, or Government owned. During the First World War, it was used in a billet in France. It served many useful purposes. One particular story is related as to how it kept a group of soldiers warm on a long train trip. It was during a cold winter night that four soldiers grouped themselves around the lamp. The little lamp was placed on the floor beneath a blanket held as a tent over it. In this manner the four soldiers were kept comfortable during the trip. One of the soldiers brought this tiny lamp back from France and recently presented it to me for my collection. It is one of my special favorites.

An epoch-making discovery of the lamp chimney transformed the whole method of oil lighting. A workman, in heating a bottle over the open flame, cracked off the bottom by accident. However, in holding it over the flame, he noticed that it burned brilliantly and more steadily. This accidental discovery of the glass chimney played an important part in every day lighting until further developments appeared.

My interest in lamps is not confined to sizes. One large banquet lamp is a compliment to my living room. It is clear glass and extremely heavy. This is a peg lamp and the font was made to unscrew from the base so that when it needed to be refueled the entire lamp did not have to be moved. This glass banquet lamp stood 37 inches high with the original chimney and glass shade. As it stands now, dressed in a modern silk shade, (made for the lamp) it measures 30 inches. In making this change, I have not destroyed the value of it as a collector's item.

My collection has paid rich dividends, not only in the seeking of them, but also in possessing and the pleasure of displaying the collection in my home. I am able to share their decorative value with many friends.

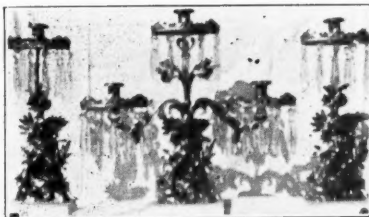

Words are poor things with which to paint pictures; lamps must be seen and used to be appreciated.

ANTIQUE SHOP AND RESIDENCE

(For Sale by owner who must transfer north for university work)

PRE-REVOLUTIONARY TAVERN on 90-Acre ESTATE

One of the oldest houses in the country, located on two main highways 90 miles from Washington, 60 miles from Richmond, in the wealthy and fashionable Charlottesville area. This charming old tavern, built in 1735, once served as Lafayette's headquarters. Its early history is described on a state historical marker at the entrance. Its name is on road-maps and on the state direction markers within a 25-mile radius. Printed booklets describing its history and background are available.

The house itself is an antique gem. Retaining its old-time charm, with fine old paneling, six fireplaces with original mantels, quaint stairways, and old doors with their H-L hinges, the house is, however, completely modernized. 12 rooms and 3½ bathrooms, steam heat, electricity, and excellent water supply.

The property consists of approximately 90 acres, mostly wooded, landscaped lawns with eight large boxwoods and a fine holly tree. There is a separate building for a workshop and a grove of peach and apple trees.

The antique shop is well established with great potentialities for further development in this distinctive setting with its unique advantages. This is an outstanding opportunity for anyone who wishes to combine a gracious life in charming surroundings with a worthwhile and pleasant business.

The price for the entire property and business is $25,000.00 Terms can be arranged. For further information, photograph, and appointments for inspection

GEARHART'S BARN

Foot-O-Ten Antiques

Box 75, Route 2, Duncansville, Pa.

HELLO FOLKS! Christmas: sure it is like the "Weather" and "Russia." We talk about them, but no one does much about it, but Henry Wallace. Poor man, he is headed for the wrong goal. So let us prepare for one more Merry Xmas and buy one gift from Hobbies pages this month. Cheerio!

Little lambs eat ivy, does eat oats. Let's change her diet, and give her this little love seat, all tufted with the prettiest shade of red velvet you ever saw. Natural refinished reinforced all thru, walnut and carved over three Victorian bows with grapes, nuts, fruits, foliage; rare type carved bow legs, 46" between arms. Saw this type priced in the City for $650. We will give, if you give $295. Guaranteed and we will refund all charges if you are not pleased.

Rosewood, and rose carved skirt, bowed, carved legs, X stretchers, brass casters, serpentine wing marble top table, 40x29". Has 14 different scallops with skirting matching scallops, $125.

Brass based lamp, similar to Rayo, but much better type; brass foot sets in stem, fastens with set screw; 8" gorgeous sky blue, genuine hobnail ball shade. Electrified, cleaned, $39.

Pair nodding bisque: Chinese girl and boy, holding large fan over heads which nod; 8" high, 6" wide. Gorgeously colored and proof, $85.

Pair, dated 1889, lace edge oval 7 1/2" Milk glass lions, from $65 to $35 for one.

White Dog, 5 1/2". M.G. $8.

White Rooster. M.G. $8.

Double lace edge M.G. 11 1/2", footed bowl, $15.

Deep blue, ruffled top water pitcher, 5 matching tumblers, floral decorations and enamel. All for $15.

Bewitched or not, we have a pair of 3" Witch Balls, amber and blown, $12.50.

Rare celery holder, 19" clear glass shell, ribbed and diamond black pattern, knob stem, thumb-print, footed base, $7.50.

Early flint glass, 7", scalloped edge, footed base open composite, thumbprint variant. One chip.

Rings like tuning fork, $5.

Large, pierced loop edge banana dish, waffle stem, footed, $6.

Four Staffordshire trinket boxes, Colonial boy and girl figurines. Very colorful; top one hand missing; 3 1/2" oval, 3 1/2" high, $12. Matching pair colorful boy in boat, oval 2 1/2 x 3" high. Small chip inside lower base on both for $20. Oval 3" covered box, gray cherries on lid, little color off cherries, $8.

Beautiful Etruscan majolica, quart size, shell and foliage, colored teapot. Proof, $10.

Set 6 vase line hobnail, 3 row tumblers; hobs on bottom; 1 has mold mark on lip. All for $42.

Two hobnail mugs, 8 rows, bottom hobs on one amber, one blue, both for $11.

Cranberry crimped top to clear hobnail waste bowl, 4" dia., 4" high, $11.

Cranberry etched floral Bohemian waste bowl, $10.

Blue Inverted Thumbprint waste bowl, $5.

Girl's lovely china tea set: 6 cups, saucers, demi-tasse size, sugar, teapot, creamer, 6 plates, cereal bowl. Practical set, all decorated in lovely violets and foliage, $23.50.

SAINTS OF ST. AUGUSTINE

New Orleans with its Mardi Gras; Green Bay, Wis., with its pro football team; etc., etc. One could go on and on indefinitely.

St. Augustine down through the years has had its hobbies, and still has them, such as its love of history and historical presentation, like the Ponce de Leon Celebration and the Spanish Fiesta. There are also many fans who have baseball for a hobby, and they are backers of the famous Saints.

But it looks as though a main hobby of the community would be the Museum of Hobbies, and also it is indicated that this new attraction will help to make the city a Mecca for numberless interested folks.

Psychiatrists and physicians prescribe hobbies for busy men and women and for bored ones. So it's a good thing for a town to become known as "a hobby town."

READER COMMENTS

Illinois—I was delighted to learn that you have found such an interesting, lovely and historical setting for your museum. Hope to be able to visit it some day.—QUEEN GRIDLEY THOMAS

Michigan—May I take this opportunity to express our pleasure at the establishment of your Museum of Hobbies? We look forward with pleasure to that season when our whole family can visit it.—MRS. R. L. SINES

New York—I feel that there is vision as well as wisdom in your conception of the St. Augustine Museum of Hobbies. I do not feel that I'm simply adding to countless encomiums of praise in stating this. The antiques business has lacked cohesion for decades. St. Augustine will provide a focal point in an old and famous city with the added advantage of climate.—GENE BROSSARD

Illinois—When HOBBIES came we all were delighted to hear of your purchase of the St. Augustine Hotel for a museum, and wish to extend to you our congratulations. May it be a successful venture. I remember my mother and father telling me of their stays in that hotel over fifty years ago, and how they loved it all—the quaintness, the quietness and the climate. Of course I have never been to Florida, but now will have a reason to go there, when your museum is ready.—KATHERINE WOODWARD

Illinois—I wish you could read all the enthusiastic letters from my customers, suppliers, and friends about your museum—and also hear what they have to say. It is bound to be a success.—T. T. FOLEY

Indiana—Dr. Bunch asked me to send you his warm regards along with hopes for success to Mr. Lightner in the establishment of his Florida museum. He hopes to see it this winter.—LEO A. VOISARD, SECRETARY TO DR. BUNCH

Florida—The publicity which you have given to the Lightner Museum of Hobbies and St. Augustine, in the August and September issues of HOBBIES MAGAZINE is priceless. Such advertising cannot be purchased. May we voice our sincere appreciation for the benefits we are bound to receive directly and indirectly. You further deserve to be complimented on your articles regarding donations to the Museum. Such articles cannot fail to produce results.—HAROLD E. RYMAN

Massachusetts—For the past month Mr. Maggi and I have been truly excited over your Museum of Hobbies and over the fact that we were going to be able to have a small part in its operation. Now, after visiting St. Augustine for the first time, I find that words are just simply inadequate. The old Alcazar, along with the town's general atmosphere and historic background are, without a doubt, a perfect setting for such a Museum. Your gift is a fine tribute to the antique business in general, and to individual collectors the world over. We are all proud of you and the people of St. Augustine should be more than grateful.—MRS. ROLLAND MAGGI

Florida—Good Luck to Mr. Lightner in his Florida Hobby Museum. I have seen the Hotel in St. Augustine and it is gorgeous! What a home for lovely old things from our past!—LEE TULLSEN

Massachusetts—Perhaps we can join the big trek to the Museum some winter soon. A vacation in St. Augustine and surrounding territory would, in itself, be a splendid treat for both of us. I am sure I would virtually "haunt" the museum and the shops, while good of 'Sol used his curative powers to give new life and strength to my handicapped husband.—MRS. HERBERT LANDICK

Maryland—Congratulations on your decision to donate your Museum to the City of St. Augustine. It will add much to the city, as well as to the nation. Eventually I may desire to place the Julia A. Purnell Museum in the building. Space required will be 2650 square feet.—W. Z. PURNELL

H. M. BAKER

WICKFORD, RHODE ISLAND

Of solid mahogany in light, warm coloring, with most beautiful and intricate Marquetry inlays of golden satinwood, this magnificent bedstead must be seen to be appreciated. Combining the rarest of woods with peerless craftsmanship, nothing so rich has been shown in decorator magazines. It is fully inlaid on every side of every surface, and is one hundred percent original and genuine, even to the deep satin surface patina. A very modest collector, or dealer, may own it at a price lower than most common beds. You ought to write to me.

Solid cherrywood slant top desk of the period c. 1770, all original, sound and tight, without any restoration. Old, thin dry finish will rub up or remove easily. Compare my price for this hard to find piece, and act quickly. It is exactly $225. Iron box type master 18th Century door lock with brass knobs, about impossible to find now, $12. Fine brass melon front door handle, c. 1780, $11. A real rarity is a small pedestal sideboard 48" long, all solid Santo Domingo mahogany, perfect original satin finish, fan carved center drawer, sheaf of wheat carved gallery, pedestal richly carved, line inlays of Holly. Period 1820, $135. Cornice mirror with bevel glass, gilt relief carved frame, leaf and vine, 28x51", is all in excellent condition. Mirror alone worth over $24.

Solid cherry tilt-top Birdcage table of large size has fine turned pedestal, snakefoot, wholly original, c. 1780. Very rare, so act quickly, $78. Real old Staffordshire figurine, natural colors girl in typical country dress, with dog, $23. Sheraton Windsor nine spindle arm chair, at $34. Copper flower basket flared, handled, 19", $6. Large, perfect china soup tureen, cover, ladle, and platter floral dec., ruffled edge. On $28. Bleu du Roi Sevres lamp, scenic and floral with much gold is a real show piece. Electrified, $74. Double Student lamp, old pink ribbed shades, is all burnished, electrified, and priced just, $69. Set six early maple ladderback chairs, period c. 1730, have original fine finish patina. Write. Scrimshaw, important pieces are now on hand. Dresden cov. garniture jar, a beauty. Photo. WRITE NOW FOR MY SPECIAL NOVEMBER LIST OF "SMALL THINGS," primitives, china, glass, lamps, clocks, and little things of every kind. Direct buying here in the heart of New England permits prices that delight collector and dealer alike, and your notation of specific needs will have my personal attention. If you cannot get it elsewhere at a price you can afford to pay, write. For if it was ever made in New England, I'll be able to help you—promptly, courteously, and at a sensible price. nc

COVER

The collection of cow creamers and cow figurines illustrated on the cover of this issue belongs to Everett N. Kearney of Salisbury, Mass.

Top shelf: The large figurine in the center is a beautifully modeled alabaster group. This is flanked by two Staffordshire examples of the bovine family.

Shelf 2: Reading from left to right. 1. Old German blue cow pitcher with ridiculous hat and clothing. 2. Highly glazed, all white English specimen, with gold trim. 3. Fine pink Spatterware. 4. Staffordshire. 5. Earliest Staffordshire figurine in the collection, with Chelsea-like ornamentation. 6. Old blue Spatterware. 7. Large, gold trimmed, English specimen. 8. Parian figurine.

Shelf 3. 1. Small white porcelain. 2. Black Jackfield with gold spots (18th century). 3. Another Jackfield. 4. Very unusual specimen, marked Copeland. 5. & 6. More Jackfields, one having gold "J" on base. 7. Rarest specimen in collection—a soft paste, 18th century example, with tiny calf beneath, crudely modeled, identified as Whieldon.

Shelf 4. 1. Black and white German Holstein model. 2. Rockingham, gold trim. 3. Mottled Bennington. 4. Black glazed Staffordshire. 5. Early small Staffordshire figurine. 5, 7, & 8. Various Rockingham and Isle of Wight types. 9. Small Delft.

Shelf 5. Contains interesting Delft specimens, another good Bennington and a comic German cow pitcher.

Shelf 6. Has some fine old reclining cow pitchers.

The bottom shelf has some later type sitting cows, a good head pitcher, and a very old Pennsylvania chalk specimen.

FOR SALE: Three story and basement brick building 30x120 feet. Business established in 1932. Well located on main street of city. Consisting of a general line of Used Household Goods, Antique Furniture, Bisque, Copper, Luster, Glassware, China, in fact, thousands of salable items. City and Suburb population of 70,000. THIS IS A GOOD GOING BUSINESS AND WILL SELL AT A SACRIFICE. Cash or Terms. SCRINGER, 433 East Michigan at Michigan Central R. R., Jackson, Mich.

These two fine old chairs are in excellent condition, usable as is and priced very moderately. For list of other good, desirable, antique furniture at wholesale prices, write,

The Publisher's Page

Naturally we get lots of inquiries as to when the museum at St. Augustine will open. We are going to open January 2 so that visitors will not be disappointed, but the museum will be far from ready. In fact, it is a two or three years' job to complete every detail that is planned. We were in favor of working along and postponing the opening for a year from this winter but the people of St. Augustine would have been greatly disappointed and likewise thousands of visitors who intended to go to Florida this winter. For that reason we have worked desperately this summer to get the material moved and to get the main hall decorating done so that we can open January 2.

The main hall will be lighted by the most majestic collection of chandeliers in the entire world, no two alike, making a scene of unforgettable splendor.

Rather than to disappoint visitors, those who desire, may pay the usual admission fee of 50c, take a look around the building and view the exhibits that are ready. They will certainly get their money's worth. We realized at the start that to do in six months what it should require two years was butting our head against the wall of impossibility, but we were willing to undertake it.

The grand opening will be held in another year when the old swimming pool, one of the largest in the country, is turned into a beautiful sunken garden and the walls of the casino decorated with museum material, such as historical quilts, fine needlework, and rich fabrics, all behind glass and effectively lighted.

Around the walls of the balcony will be a collection of busts of the world's important leaders—Lincoln, Homer, Columbus, Voltaire, Marcus Aurelius, Washington, Dante, Goethe, Shakespeare, Napoleon, Emerson, Webster, Jefferson and a long list of the great who will listen to the discussions and inspire the speaker and his audience. They will come to life to give guidance and council to those assembled there.

St. Augustine has no public hall and we predict that the year after the new auditorium is ready a state convention will be held there almost every week. And St. Augustine can get National conventions. They don't think so but we're telling them now they can get a certain type of national convention the same as Niagara Falls, French Lick, Hot Springs, Asheville, and other smaller resort cities.

The fine wood paneling which is being taken out of the museum in Chicago will be put up in the meantime. It will house the platform and the entire front of the casino. The pipe organ will also be installed by that time. It happens that our organ is an identical twin of the organ in the Flagler Memorial Church. The Flagler organ is No. 452, installed in 1889 and our organ is No. 459 first installed in the year 1891.

The skylight of the old swimming pool will be replaced by three stained glass domes. The sunken garden will be lighted by an extensive collection of Tiffany lamps, which will play their riotous colors through the flowers, palms and ferns. In the garden will be occasional settees and sofas for distinguished guests. The platform will be one of the most magnificent to be seen anywhere. No wonder it will take another year of time!

By then all the rooms on the 2nd floor will read, especially lighted, each one a show in itself. In its glory the museum as a whole will present a startling effect. On the occasion of the grand opening some unusual publicity stunts will draw to it the attention of the nation.

For the current year, we expect to have a cornerstone laying, and in this cornerstone we will seal historical material. The crypt will be opened in 100 years and resealed. Oglethorpe University, in the neighboring state of Georgia, recently sealed a crypt that is not to be opened for 5,000 years. In it was placed, among others, a copy of HOBBIES, probably to show the funny things people did in their leisure time in this generation, but archaeologists have proven that people had the hobby of collecting and preserving historical objects 5,000 years ago, the same as we do now. We have provided that our crypt shall be opened in 100 years with the idea that there may be some still living then who had heard from their own ancestors the spoken word about the progress of the institution. We want to place here our prediction that within 100 years this museum will house some of the most valuable and certainly the most interesting and human interest material in America, and will have taken its place as one of the important museums of the nation. We are also going to preserve in it the words of other prophets, good or evil. This reminds us of a lady antique dealer in St. Augustine who remarked "I hope he does not send a lot of that cheap hobby stuff down here to spoil what antiques we already have".

This woman did not have over $500 invested in her shop. One of the Dresden pieces that we sent down there would bring more than all she possessed. All those instances would make interesting material to uncover 100 years from now. It is possible that in that day the world may need a source of laughter. This incident has prompted one of the St. Augustine clubs to write down every criticism and prophecy to seal in the cornerstone.

We want to ask all of our readers to send any small objects, printed matter, or other material that has,

or will have historical significance, to place in this cornerstone.

—o—

A friend handed us a letter from a California gentleman who, in the past years, was Mayor of an important city of that state. This letter said "watch those politicians at St. Augustine take Lightner for a ride." I told my friend, "Lyon must judge all politicians by himself".

I gave the museum to the people of St. Augustine in trust and if the politicians take anyone for a ride it will be the people of St. Augustine. The citizens of the ancient city are custodians of these treasures held in sacred trust.

Louis Tiffany, who will go down in history as one of the great American artists, left his magnificent estate, with his greatest works of art as a school for artists, and he himself personally appointed a Board of Trustees. Mr. Tiffany endowed the institution. Fifteen years after his death these trustees went before the Court and asked that the provisions of the will be set aside for two reasons. One, on account of inflation and high costs the endowment would not bring sufficient revenue to maintain it. Secondly, foreign students with communistic tendencies had elbowed their way in to such an extent that American students, whom Mr. Tiffany wanted to help, found the surroundings uninviting and the scholarships unpleasant. Thus ended a worthy dream, well meant but poorly executed.

St. Augustine is a city of many wealthy people, and while we think the support of a great tourist public and our own endowment will sustain it, in case of an emergency some citizens of wealth might help. But this eventuality we aim to guard against to the utmost before the sun goes down. Some have suggested, as insurance, that honorary memberships be taken and these pledge the small sum of $10 a year. Upon their death they recommend another person of their own choosing to take their membership, but that their pledge should not be in effect unless the trustees call upon them in case of an emergency, which is hoped will never happen. These folks would be godmothers and godfathers. We are not yet ready to say we will put this plan into effect.

Others have thought that at least two of the trustees should be from outside and of nation-wide prominence, inasmuch as when the museum is going and can be visualized, and its possibilities realized, wealth will be poured into the city, there to be preserved. Broader selection of trustees would encourage national giving. We can say to those that there is nothing in the plan to prevent this. Two of the trustees are not self-perpetuating and when they die or retire other members appoint their successors. It is, therefore, only a question of time until the Board will probably realize the benefit of inviting outside men or women to partake in the management.

The truth is that three members of the Board are not public officials and those who are act, not in an official or political capacity, but purely in a civic capacity. You contributors have a right to ask these questions and I can assure you that every step has been taken to safeguard the future. The plan is better than the independent trusteeship who are responsible to no one but the estate. Here the trustees are responsible, in a moral sense, to the people.

We have all seen these projects go wrong and in this office I have had opportunity to delve deeply into all such and avoid their mistakes. I assure you the enterprise will carry on perpetually. I have safeguarded its future in ways that will be unfolded from time to time and they will be quite convincing.

If you ever pull a stunt of this kind you must expect a certain amount of grief. Entirely outside the category of grief we might mention that we had scores of dealers and collectors who wanted to know if we would not sell them something they had seen in the museum before we moved it. We told them we could not be Indian givers and that it was beyond our possession. Many did not get the proper conception of the project. They seemed to think I was giving away a lot of stuff I didn't want. In fact, I wanted it so badly I longed to preserve it against dissipation. I didn't give it away, I left it in trust that it might always be enjoyed and others might add to it.

And there were many close friends and relatives and employees who thought maybe they could pick out a piece for themselves before it was shipped. If that had been done the best specimens in every collection would have been taken and what was left gone to St. Augustine. When the trustees asked me if I wished to reserve anything I assured them I wanted to reserve nothing. After that I could not afford to lose their confidence as much as I would like to have obliged in some cases. If I was to expect good faith on the part of the trustees to carry out my ideals in the years after the shadows fall I must practice the strictest good faith on my own part. I even gave the personal jewelry that I had worn in past years.

From my own office in the publishing building I sent the morning glory chandelier made in France for Maximilian and Carlotta and which once hung in Chapultepec castle. I sent the famous Dutch marquetry desk made for Napoleon's brother when he was placed on the throne of Holland. I sent the fine fireplace from the home of the late U. S. Judge Carpenter, which stood opposite the Newberry library in Chicago. I sent the carved Gothic arch from the home of the late John J. Moore, president of the Diamond Match Co. I sent my own beautiful mahogany desk at which I sat when HOBBIES was originally conceived. May they all rest there in peace!

There are no jobs open, please. There were so many applications that, had we hired them all, the institution would have been burdened with a pay roll of exactly $325,775 a year. Most had no skill of any kind to be of help. Some wanted to act as hostesses. There is not a museum in the world that employs hostesses and we do not expect to break the custom. Another suggested we buy a Hammond organ and she would play soft music while the visitors sauntered through the place. We did not think such a modern thing as a Hammond organ would be at home among its antique surroundings, especially in view of the fact that we have a $33,000 pipe organ.

Others, many others, offered to do most any thing to get their expenses paid for a winter trip to Florida. These usually came in twos and threes. There would be natural resentment on the part of local property tax payers, residents and voters if we brought in visitors to place on the payroll of a public institution. Outside of the most highly specialized work, such as a pipe organ erector or a stained-glass artist the employees must be residents of Florida or those moving there permanently. We were gratified with the offers to donate but the offers to sell us something, so far, amounts to over $1,200,000. One man had three small meerschaum pipes that he would sell for enough to start in business. A woman would part with an old canopy bed for enough to buy a home.

And I thank those many who made suggestions for the educational program. They are appreciated. Most suggest an art school and there are other good ideas. But I will insist on two plans, one a course on antiques and American tradition, the only one in any higher institution of learning in America. The other a handicraft school where the youth and even married women can attend from the native cracker country and learn to make at home such articles as can be immediately marketed, thus helping the economic status of the needy and handicapped. In this we are promised the active support of certain large department stores as well as the advertising columns of HOBBIES Magazine. But we shall insist that these courses be under the supervision and a part of the curriculum of the University of Florida; the natives to be given free scholarships by wealthy readers of HOBBIES.

ABOUT BEN ADHEM

The Trust Department of the Bank has this fine Royal Bronze Group of three figures. Each one is clear and beautiful.

About Ben Adhem, the Angel and Saint Peter. The lower solid marble base was especially made for it in Italy. It is 36" long and 18" wide, and 24" high. The bronze figure of the Angel is 23" high. The entire group and the marble base is nearly five feet tall. This outstanding art piece was brought from Europe years ago. The base was especially carved for it.

The Price is $275 carefully packed.

(It was appraised at $1,000.) np

Notes on THE HISTORY OF GLASS

From "The Great Industries of the U. S., 1872"

The introduction of the manufacture of glass into the United States was contemporaneous with the settlement of the country. With the establishment of the first colony at Jamestown, Va., in 1607, some of the colonists brought over were glass makers, and the first cargo sent back to England contained "trials of pitch, tar, glass, frankincense, and soap ashes, with what wainscot and clapboard could be provided." At the same time, Captain John Smith, of famous memory, returned "a plain and scholarly answer" by the same vessel to the council in London, who had complained of the want of profitable returns from the colony. From Stith's History of Virginia we learn that the glass house stood in the woods, about a mile from Jamestown. Small as it unquestionably was, yet it deserves mention as being the first manufactory erected in the territory of the United States. Stith also informs us that, in 1621, a fund was subscribed to establish a factory of glass beads, to be used as a currency in the trade with the Indians for furs, and a Captain Norton, with some skilled Italian workmen, was sent over for the purpose of establishing this profitable speculation. At the same time, also, a subscription was opened for the purpose of importing women into the colony, so as to give the necessary conditions for the permanency of the settlement, and it would appear that this last venture proved more immediately profitable than the first, the price of maids rising as high as one hundred and fifty pounds of tobacco, and the demand being active enough to quickly absorb the supply.

In the settlement at Massachusetts the first establishment of a glass manufactory is said to have been made at the village of Germantown, in Braintree. Glass bottles alone were made here, and the business was continued until shortly before the revolution, when the failure of the proprietors and the burning of the buildings led to the abandonment of the enterprise, which has never been resumed. In 1639 a glass house was established at Salem, and the court granted "to the glass men several acres of ground adjoining to their horses," for the purpose of aiding the enterprise. In 1611 the court further authorized the authorities of the town of Salem to lend the proprietors thirty pounds, to be deducted from the next town rate, and to be repaid by the borrowers "if the work succeeded, when they are able." Bottles and coarse articles of inferior kinds of glass were alone made here. The use of glass in windows was at this time not common in the mother country, and of course it was not in the colonies. One of the leading members of the Plymouth settlement wrote to his friends in England, "Bring paper and linseed oil for your windows, cotton yarn for your lamps." In 1629 Mr. Higginson, writing from Salem, says, "Bring glass for your windows."

In 1752 the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act granting the sole privilege of making glass in the province to Isaac C. Winslow and his associates. In New York, Jan Smeeds is supposed to have been the first glass maker, and a map made in 1732 indicates the existence of two establishments in the city for glass making. A glass house is also mentioned as existing in Philadelphia in 1683. The business did not, however, assume any importance in the country before the time of the revolution, although glass was one of the articles taxed by the mother country. During the revolution, the importations being suspended, the need of glass was greatly felt. Lord Sheffield, writing when peace was declared, says, "There are glass works in Pennsylvania. Bad glass is made in New Jersey for windows, but there is not any quantity of glass made in America as yet except bottles."

In 1788 the legislature of New York voted a loan of three thousand pounds for eight years to the proprietors of a glass factory near Albany, which, in 1797, became the property of an association known as the "Hamilton Manufacturing Company," and was exempted from taxation by the state for five years. The glass made by them was in good repute, and the business was actively carried on, producing about twenty thousand feet of glass a month, besides bottles and flint glass, and continued until 1815, when it was discontinued from the exhaustion of the supply of fuel in the vicinity of the works.

Glass works were commenced in Boston in 1787, which in 1800 produced about a hundred thousand dollars' worth a year, and the business is still carried on most successfully in Massachusetts. Connecticut, Maryland, and Virginia also commenced the production of glass during the last century. The first factory commenced in Pittsburg, which is at present a most important centre of the production of glass in this country, was begun in 1795. General O'Hara deserves the chief credit for establishing the business in Pittsburg. Among his papers at his death was found a memorandum to this effect, "To-day we made the first bottle, at a cost of thirty thousand dollars."

'Match Box Labels of the World'

By A. J. Cruise

The coloured labels adorning the familiar match-box have been in use for more than a century, since John Walker, an English chemist, gave the world its first friction match in 1826. They have portrayed an ever-increasing variety of subjects, colours and designs, from glamorous women to nursery rhymes, historical scenes to beast and fishes. These labels are now much sought after by collectors all over the world who enjoy a hobby which is even older than stamp collecting, offering an equally wide range of colourful and interesting material. 'Match Box Labels of the World' will introduce beginners to a delightful hobby, provide a work of reference for experienced collectors; while the subject, being both original and full of interest, should have a wide appeal to the general public.

16 half-tone plates and 8 colour plates reproducing 64 rare and interesting labels

Contains a History of Fire-making Appliances from Primitive Man to the Modern Match, together with a History of the World's Labels.

The book is dedicated to King Farouk of Egypt for his co-operation in furnishing data and labels on the Egyptian match industry.

The cheap and serviceable match doomed the snuff habit, people took to smoking tobacco instead of snuffing it. This book is of rare, historical importance for the foregoing reason.

BELLS

"New" Sleigh Bells

Sold After 40 Years

This story on bells in the Sunbury, Pa., Daily Item has an unusual note.

"When C. Henry Pontius, of Island Park, appealed publicly for some sleigh bells to be used by Boy Scouts in Utah, he had no idea about the price of sleigh bells made 40 years ago.

"Now he knows.

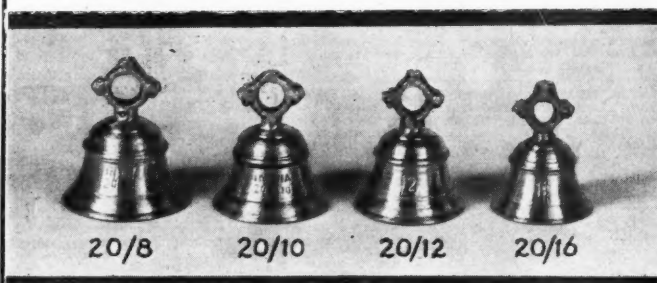

"Doing his bit to help some scouts in Ogden, Utah, who needed sleigh bells for folk dancing, Mr. Pontius appealed through the Daily Item for donations of bells from any person who might have them. There was no response.

"So Mr. Pontius set out to buy a few strands.

"The first set he found, pretty well used, was priced at $10. Mr. Pontius moved on, located another set at a regional antique mart for $5. Again he moved on.

"This time Mr. Pontius tried, on a hunch, at a local hardware store. And there,—complete with a 40-year-old price tag—was a strand of sleigh bells that hadn't been touched for four decades. The leather was soft, the bells pure and pleasant.

"The price: $1.25."

BELLS FOR COLLECTORS

India Brass Sweetmeat Bells . . . In India there are many rich sweetmeats made from milk, sugar and ghee (an oil made from clarified butter). Shops are scattered in various parts of town. Halwais (sweetmeat makers) sit in the center of their shops surrounded by many sweets in plates all around them. When a customer desires a sweet he lifts it from the plate and wraps it in a green palm leaf. When sweets, which the customer asks for, are far from his reach, he leans over, keeping his balance by holding on to a bell, which hangs from the ceiling suspended by a chain. Naturally when the sweetmeat shops are busy, the ringing of these bells can be heard for many blocks away.

Tag with story furnished with each bell.

STAMPS

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

There were 265,773 covers cancelled at Washington, D. C., on the first day sale of the 10-cent air mail stamp on August 30. Stamp sales totaled 361,015; post office sales, 251,492, Philatelic Agency, 109,523.

oOo

In connection with the special cancellation on the occasion of the Trans-Mississippi Philatelic Society Convention, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, October 3 to 5, there were three postmarking stamps in use, two of the long bar type and one of the short bar variety.

oOo

The first regularly scheduled helicopter air mail service was inaugurated by the Post Office Department in the Los Angeles area on October 1, with Los Angeles Airways, Inc., as the carrier.

The first helicopter route gives direct air mail service between the Los Angeles airport and nine outlying communities to the north. Many other towns are to be served indirectly through these offices. On the same day, a shuttle service will begin operation between the airport and the Terminal Annex post office in downtown Los Angeles. A second helicopter route serving cities to the east of Los Angeles began service on October 16.

oOo

The 3-cent Constitution stamp is used in commemoration of the 150th Anniversary of the launching of the U. S. Frigate Constitution, better known as "Old Ironsides," was placed on sale at Boston, Mass., on October 21.

This new stamp has as its central design a naval architect's line drawing of the Constitution. The naval architect who drew this design from the best available sources is Andrew H. Hepburn of Boston.

Supporting the main motif on either side are naval guns of that era drawn from Navy Department records of the twenty-four pounders originally mounted on this famous fighting ship.

Arranged in an arc across the top of the stamp are sixteen stars representing the number of states in the Union in 1797, the year of the launching.

The Constitution is shown running before a light breeze and approaching a home port with her commission pennant at the main.

The stamp is 0.84 inches by 1.44 inches in dimensions, arranged horizontally. This is the same size as the current special delivery stamp. Arranged in the upper left and right corners, respectively, is the wording, "United States 3c" and "Postage 3c" in Roman type. In a ribbon across the bottom appears the inscription, "1797 U.S. Frigate Constitution 1947" in the same lettering. The stamp is in sheets of 50.

Elaborate first day sale ceremonies were arranged by the Post Office and Navy Departments, with the first sale on the deck of the Constitution, anchored in the Charlestown Navy Yard at Boston.

An initial printing of 125,000,000 stamps was ordered.

oOo

Summing up the first anniversary of the five-cent air mail on October 1, Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan issued the following pertinent facts in honor of the occasion which we quote, in part:

"Since that day October 1, 1946, approximately 78,000,000 pounds of domestic air mail have been dispatched. This is an average of 6,500,000 pounds a month, and represent a gain of 33 per cent over the 4,888,195 pounds of air mail flown in September, 1946, the last month under the old-time rate of eight cents.

"An indication of the popularity of five-cent air mail during its first year is borne out by official reports showing that eight-cent air mail had been experiencing a steady monthly decline in volume since the peak month of October, 1945, due to the return of service men from overseas duty following the end of the war and to the continued higher rate.

"Inauguration of five-cent air mail was an important step in furthering a service which had its inception less than three decades ago, but which has in this short period revolutionized our concept of space and time in relation to moving the mails. Thirty years ago it took a letter five days to cross the United States.

"Today ten-hour journeys by air are routine. In line with this policy of carrying the mails speedily, safely, and at as low a cost as possible, the Post Office Department on November 1, 1946, also made sweeping reductions in its air mail rates to foreign countries. Rates which previously varied from 15 to 70 cents a half-ounce now range from 10 cents to Latin American countries to a maximum of 25 cents to Asia and the Middle East. And to our neighboring countries of Canada and Mexico, the five-cent an ounce domestic rate was established.

"The response to these lower rates has been impressive. For the first six months of 1947, the average monthly mail load overseas has been 354,525 pounds, a 75% increase over the 202,438 pounds of mail flown overseas in October of 1946 under the old rates.

"To supplement these new low foreign air mail rates and to encourage a greater exchange of correspondence between the United States and countries overseas, the Post Office Department on April 29 of this year inaugurated the 10-cent air letter sheet which can be sent to any country on the globe.

"But as important as the lowering of rates has been in increasing the use of air mail, the Post Service has gone a step further toward attaining its real objective—12 hour air mail delivery between any two metropolitan areas. A major volume of air mail originates in large cities and surrounding towns and the problem has always been that of eliminating or reducing as much as possible the time consumed in delivering or dispatching air mail from airports to post offices by surface means. . . ."

IT SEEMS TO ME

By FRANK C. ROSS

Discontinued and New

Some statistically minded collector is going to break out "in figgers" with the list of "discontinued" and "new" stamp issuing areas. And we are due to get surprises. After the Channel Islands issue made us gasp, we had hopes of Isle of Man. Guess Atlee and pals are too busy. Or have not "nationalized" or whatever it is, the G. P. O. as yet. That is to come? Then one mail a day, one penny all the way, they hope. Maybe no mails Saturday, we have heared that point under James Aloysius' incentive removal and short hour system in many places, cities are the worst. And substitute carrier errors are worse than no mail. And there is one such every week. But "on again" is busy building political fences and hiding political losses and fancy mis-spending. Will the worm turn? You guess!

Album Notes

Standardization has materially aided the sale, the mechanical motions and the cost of many products. Agreements by the album makers as to sheet size, quadrille area, binder holes (which is now standardized some—could be more) paper thickness and other album points would materially reduce our costs and our purchase troubles. As it is every album man makes something different (not always new) with the idea, antiquated and long since exploded in the metal trades) that his customers will be forced to come to him for sheets, binders, posts, etc. That is silly.

Collecting is a hobby, and few of us have run to 100% binders of one size, or 100% sheets of another size, or even hinges and small items, and we like it. So if there were one size sheet (say 11 x 8½ which is letter sheet size) and another size for those who add sheets and large pieces, and the rest just thrown aside, we'd be better served, better satisfied, more easily supplied. If the local "short stock" man failed, we'd get the same thing from someone else. As it is now "the same thing" may not exist anywhere in 100 miles.

Illogical for album men to ignore standardization and its opportunities. Sure, they'd have to agree with each other, for once. What harm? Hasn't hurt the producers of bolts, screws, nuts,—that list could go on for pages. Even your electric light bulb is standardized so it will fit any socket, by agreement. Why multiply album sizes, just to be different?

Overdone

Some people feel that to make an advertisement "draw" they have to stretch the copy to the bursting point, or the inferences to the last possible end of stretch before rupture. That may be good for selling "two pants suits" if there is any, but it surely is a pain in the neck in a stamp advertisement. More, it is often so deliberate that it means the advertiser knows he must make a new (actually NEW) customer for every sale. Is this right?

Editors cannot always tell the facts, and they surely cannot know that because of interest a "small job lot" may well be exhausted of some specially wanted item before the print has been a day old or the edition wholly delivered.

Advertisers fail to appreciate the expanse of territory, the area of circulation, the width and population of the 48 States. They put in an advertisement that would be exhausted by the circulation of a small town weekly, and the rat race begins, often with credit slips and other abuses. Why not assure the editor that there is stock enough, you hope, to fill possible replies?

But the best way for future business is to start with the truth. The facts. That makes friends.

Inflation Issues

Again because some do not recall the first German inflation period, or passed it up as "impossible," a suggestion as to collecting the Hungarian and other inflation issues "both ways," used and mint. The prices are not too great, the result is informative, and the record once completed is satisfactory because it explains in visual form the real meaning of "Inflation issues." The real inside of the troubles that the world has, and had, with its governmental inadequacies. That is very politely saying something that could be greatly extended and made into political argument.

As to mounting these in pairs. The use of the quadrille page-blank, and the arrangement depends on your own taste.

But a single square between and two squares between differing values seems to be customary. I have seen many such. Of course page sizes control the number of pairs (used and mint) and the length of the series controls the page content. But leave room enough to add a few variant surcharges and such (there are some) and also leave room enough for a good and memory backing write up. And the better the write up, the better the later aid to others who may study. The method is not common because the printed pages do not allow "two of a kind, mint and used."

But it is well worth while.

Some of the crowded albums get the result by "shingling" the used item under the mint one. That of course is your own business, and choice. But it makes for clumsiness and does not aid written up issues at all. Crowded pages do not give either safety from damage or satisfactory effect to the visiting student. Neatness counts.

Greek issues for the same purpose—inflation, are much in evidence. Being larger than Hungarians the job of placement "both ways" is harder, but the effect is very fine and colorful if the caution about crowding is observed.

NUMISMATICS

NUMISMATIC THOUGHTS

By FRANK C. ROSS

"Good Bye, Mr. Gold"

Gold coins, according to all indications, will soon become merely collectors' items; they are fast disappearing from currency requirements. Mr. Allan Sutherland in a paper, "The passing of precious metal money," read before the New Zealand Numismatic Society explains it very clearly. Quote:—"Goodbye to Gold" was a general cry after the last financial depression, 1931-33. During the Great War I, Great Britain went off the gold standard. From 1925 to 1931 there was a return to the gold standard. In 1930, the United Kingdom melted Thirty-pounds million worth of sovereigns, much of it new, went into ingots, and from that time onwards it may be said that the gold currencies in most countries went out of the front door. A modified gold standard, but not a gold currency, was now coming in through the back door of most countries under the cloak of the Breton Woods Agreement. The generation that handled gold currency is fast dying out. Gone are the days when the true "hard money" consisted of discs of precious metal, with intrinsic values equivalent to their superscriptions. Shortly, silver coins of the United Kingdom, and presumably those of Commonwealth countries, will have no more intrinsic value than that of steel washers. We shall then have a purely token coinage. Plastic tokens are being used by the British military forces in Germany and, provided the issue is controlled, these plastic discs will be equally efficient as a medium of exchange. Nevertheless, the loss of precious metal money is a break from British tradition. Sterling values have been anonymous with sterling-worth—solid and unchangeable. For over 2000 years Britain has used precious-metal money. The year 1947 will be a landmark in British numismatic history in that it will mark the opening of a new era of base-metal or purely token money. Even in these barbarous times precious-metal money was used, and specimens which have come down to us show in their crude designs the chequered history of England.

Mr. Thomas L. Elder in his Recollections Of An Old Collector in September HOBBIES advises "The very best buy today is any or all gold coins, United States or foreign."

Don't Wake a Sleeping Dog

If you happen to find a collection of valuable old coins cached in your cellar, don't wake it up. Let it get its nap out — its sleep is worth more than its bark. A Philadelphian unearthed $92,800 in his cellar lately — a life time dream come true. But it turned out to be "finders weepers — others keepers". The generally supposed law of "finders keepers", in this instance at least, did not go along with the find. An AP news item says "Some twenty-eight individuals, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and now the United States government are involved in the share-claiming of $92,800 found in a South Philadelphia cellar by a book-keeper." The item further states that the internal revenue department filed income tax liens against the finder, his wife, and four others for $18,753 each totaling more than the amount found. Claims were also filed against twenty-two others. As a climax to the finder's already mountain of troubles, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania served notice that an exchequer had been appointed and the money was not to be disposed of until the State acted. The State also made a claim under an old British treasury law, it was reported.

If you have been contemplating a treasure hunt, you had better postpone it until such a time that some International Court hands down a decision as to whether a treasure find is a "finders weepers" or a "finders keepers", otherwise you might lose out in a big find.

Rainbow Currency

Congresswoman Edith N. Rogers of Massachusetts is going to try and induce Congress to add color to our paper currency, rainbow it, so to speak. It is rather confusing with all the big family of paper money children bearing the same name, Long Green; if Mrs. Rogers is successful, each denominational issue will have a name of its own. Already aunts and uncles are suggesting names for the progeny of the anticipated monetary blessed event. Such as Long-Green for the $1 bill, Blue Jay for the $2, Red Bird for the $5; Brown Derby for the $10, and so on up the line to the largest denomination, which, of course, would be dubbed Royal Purple.

It is argued that the one-color scheme is a handicap to the illiterates; but another writer has rebutted this with "What about the color blind—it is questionable if there are not more color blind people than illiterates." Another writer intimates that it would please the gamblers, literalizing the familiar gamblers' request, "Let's see the color of your dough."

But seriously speaking, Mrs. Rogers may have something on the ball (or in her bill — she expects to introduce a bill in Congress). Vari-hued paper money would be a time saver to the illiterates, to the weak-eyed, to cashiers, and especially to bank tellers. The present principal identification mark on paper bills is the portrait of some famous person, and it might be a good idea, at that, to give the honored gentlemen a more colorful background.

Necessity Mothers a New Metal For Coins

"These, too, shall pass away." Gold, silver, copper, brass have been the spinal-column of metal currency for centuries, but like other age-old necessities, currency "musts" are passing away. Gold is now more conveniently and expeditiously handled as bars than as coins; silver, brass and copper are becoming more useful in the business world than in our currency. What shall take their place? The selection of a substitute is a very serious problem, as the new materials must meet many stringent currency requisites as to durability, appearance, and general fitness.

Steel, zinc, tin and plastic used in war-time emergency coins have proven unadaptable for a permanent coinage. Several countries are now experimenting with pure nickel. It is claimed and generally believed that pure nickel comes the nearest to a perfect coin metal. It is durable, keeps its color, its corrosiveness is practically nil, and is almost counterfeited proof as it requires special machinery to convert into coins, a too expensive process for counterfeiters to work at a profit. In former times coins were changed from time to time to meet new metal prices, but of late years subsidiary coins have been looked upon as "tokens" regardless of weight and size, so there would be nothing amiss in having all our subsidiary coins made of one metal, preferably pure nickel, unless something more desirable turns up.

An Accolated Coin is one bearing two or more profile heads, one overlapping the other, like the Lafayette dollar and some of the other commemorative coins.

RECOLLECTIONS OF AN OLD COLLECTOR

By THOMAS L. ELDER

The A. N. A. Convention

Seven hundred collectors converged at Buffalo to attend the A. N. A. Convention. Quite a contrast to the 1901 convention when only fifteen were present. I was there at the time. The big attraction of the Pan American Exposition did not make that convention an important and well patronized affair. It seemed more like the drab obsequies over the death of some important member. There was no auction, such as there is today.

It is interesting to note that the celebrated Hines 1799 cent sold for $1500. Foreign gold, of all things, was not as active in the bidding as was anticipated. Some of the U. S. offerings sold well enough.

It is difficult with cheap money to see how coins can go at slaughter prices today.

Dr. Reeve Dies. Age 100

Brig. Gen. C. Mac Reeve of the U. S. forces died recently at his home at Minnetonka Beach, Minn. He was undoubtedly the oldest coin collector in the U. S. He was most active in large cents from 1908 to 1920. The last coin he bought, was a beautiful gold Stater of Carthage, which he secured through me.

His great age was secured by taking things easy in later life and by his favorite hobby.

Dr. Hall's Second 1799 Cent Sells For $350.

Dr. Hall's 1799 over 1798 cent, with boldest over-date known sold recently to a Reading, Pa., collector for $350, a very moderate price for such a gem. The same private collector secured the famous Dr. Hall perfect date 1799 some years ago for only $300. So the two noted cents are together as they should be. The Hines 1799 piece sold for $1500, and it is believed it is very little better than the Hall specimens. Two collectors bid on the Hines cents years ago which put the price up to $2500. At $300 and $350 respectively the Hall specimens may be regarded today on our 50-cent dollar as virtually a give-away price.

The collector who purchased the Hall specimen now has one of the very finest cent collections in the country, and he deserves great credit in adding the best gems from every sale in recent years to give his collection unsurpassed value in quality and condition. The whole story would make nice reading for collectors. It took money and patience to get this collection together.

Always Saleable

My 50 years experience teaches me one positive fact and that is that any coin or note has a market somewhere among collectors. As a boy I started advertising in the "American Boy". I soon worked the copy up so that it brought in on average of 50 letters per day. I listed one item, "100 mixed coins, poor and fair, $1.00," and I soon sold out on these. These beginners could not afford expensive coins. These started many a boy on his way to collecting coins.

Once in 1901, at Low's sale, I bought 1000 poor and holed coins at one and one-half cents each. Soon these were all sold.

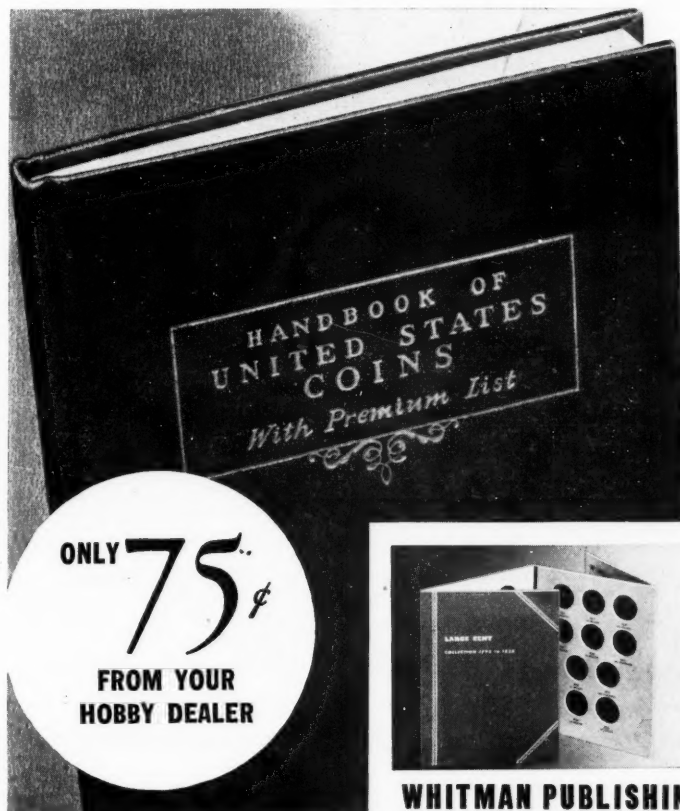

This all proves that any coin or note may be sold. So don't be discouraged. Become a coin optimist.

Death of Carl Wurtzbach

Recently there died in Lee, Mass., a noted veteran collector, Carl Wurtzbach in his 83rd year. A coin collector from his boyhood days, he had a long and interesting career in business and in coins and tokens. It was through his efforts that another

FOREIGN GOLD

Almost every country in the world has called in all gold and melted it into bars, to be used in foreign exchange. Choice coins are getting rarer every year and increase in value an average of 30% annually. They represent the finest possible investment. My lists will give you a correct idea of present values and will be sent to any collector or investor. My mail auction catalogues have appeared every other month for the past 10 years. They always list many fine specimens. Write me at once if interested and we are sure to do some business. mh84e

Numismatic Land-Mark to be razed. Thomas K. Griffin in the New Orleans Item says:—Passing of another French Quarter Landmark—the old Citizens Bank Building—will shortly take place. The structure will be demolished and the site used to construct a new two story building to be occupied by a drug store. One of the choicest legends about the old bank was its claim that it originated the word DIXIE as a synonym for the South. On the face of its ten-dollar bills, the most popular notes it issued, the bank printed in bold letters the word "DIX", the French equivalent of ten. In time, the bank claimed, the word was in common use by all nationalities. When traders up the Mississippi were heading for New Orleans, they would say they were going after some "DIXIES." And, so the legend goes, as a result of this custom, people came to refer to the South as "DIXIE"—the land where ten-dollar bills abounded.

She Had His Phone Number. In Amarillo, Texas, (UP), a man walked into a store and paid for merchandise with a $10 bill marked with a telephone number. Then a woman came in; she paid with a $1 bill. When the clerk handed her the change she protested that she had handed him a $10 bill, marked with a telephone number. The clerk looked in his cash register; there was the bill, and he gave the woman $9 more.

Straws Mark The Wind. All vanes point to the gradual disuse of silver as coin material. Bullion silver is becoming so necessary in the trades that it is more and more becoming considered as an article of merchandise instead of a precious metal. An Australian news item, May 24, says "The Australian Parliamentary Labor Party has approved reduction of the silver content of Australia's coinage. Silver prices have concerned the nation for a long time. Australia borrowed a considerable quantity of silver from Great Britain which it has to repay in full and in kind. Australia also has to repay American coins acquired during the war."

Upsets. Coins, too, have their upsets. Gilbert C. Heyde in his book COINS says:—A coin is said to be normal if, on holding the coin out in front of one with the obverse up-right, the reverse, when viewed from the back, is also upright. Should the reverse be upside down, the piece is said to be upset.

great collector was developed. I refer to Dewitt S. Smith of Lee, Mass., a paper manufacturer, who gathered together the best collection of American Colonial and U. S. silver coins. Mr. Smith has formerly cultivated orchids for a hobby, but Mr. Wurtzbach turned his tastes to coins.

Mr. Wurtzbach attended notable American coin sales from 1892 on. He was at my first New York sale in September, 1905, and bought notable coins at my sale in 1908 of the Gschwind collection. Among the gems he secured was a Washington half-dollar at $270. He formed an important collection of the Pine and Oak tree series and had made quite a study of them. He was well and favorably known among collectors. I had known him for more than 40 years. His going has saddened all who knew him.

Mr. Ira Harshbarger, manager of the 1947 Stone Age Fair, held at Loveland, Colo., the latter part of August, writes that the three-day meeting was highly gratifying, with some 3,000 attending the lectures and viewing the display of Indian and prehistoric relics. Some 32 exhibitors from Colorado, Wyoming and adjacent states entered collections of archaeological material. The lectures were illustrated with slides in colors and also white and black. The cooperation of the City of Loveland and Chamber of Commerce, and sponsored by the Pioneer Museum of Loveland, made possible the success of the unique affair. Other communities could profit by following the example set by this little Colorado city.

Reconstructing Tribal History

A full-size reconstruction of a prehistoric Iroquois Long House in the Hall of Man at the Rochester, N. Y., Museum of Arts and Sciences has just been completed and is open for public inspection according to Museum Director, W. Stephen Thomas.

This bark "Long House" shows the internal portion leading to an outdoor view through an open door at one end and is occupied by a family of life-size figures carrying out usual activities around a fire. One figure carving out a wooden bowl is a replica of a living Indian, Arleigh M. Hill, a full-blooded Seneca Indian and a member of the Rochester Museum staff who is widely known among Lacrosse fans. The cabin is fully equipped with many of the articles which would be found in a prehistoric Iroquois dwelling of this general area. These early tribesmen were a cooperative community people. Crops and game were shared by all. The Indian women raised corn, beans, squashes, pumpkins and tobacco which were kept in bark store houses or pits dug in the ground. The Indian men were the hunters and brought in the game. All these things were the property of the entire Indian village and were shared by all. The painted scene through the open doorway is of a palisade of pointed tree trunks which surrounded Indian villages and served for defense.

The reconstruction of this cabin is based upon information obtained archaeologically and historically and it presents new life to the archaeological material which is exhibited in cases beside it. Dr. William A. Ritchie, museum archaeologist, planned and installed the prehistoric Iroquois Long house, and John B. Upham and Jon Alexander, museum artists, constructed the building and artistic details, resulting in the realistic effect. Members of the museum cabinet shop headed by Rudolph H. Kressl built the case and cabinet work through which the exhibit is viewed.

TEXAS RELICS

By ROGER N. CONGER

A few years ago, I derived considerable interest from the exploration of a small Red River village site in the westernmost corner of Grayson County, near the town of Gordonville.

Description of Site.

The village site, while small (about 50x90 yards in area), is admirably located, on the east bank of a deep-cut small creek, and about 200 yards from Red River, it lies on the level known locally as the "second bottom," and in a well-sheltered hollow of the cedar covered hills. The soil is sandy loam, with erosion bad. The site has been under cultivation for many years, and many hundreds of artifacts have been found upon it, indicating a very extended period of habitation.

Type of Site.

A late prehistoric, pottery site, sherds occur in very limited numbers, all of plain black, gray, or reddish ware, all containing a percentage of ground white shell. Of projectile points, about 60% are small bird points. To the writer's knowledge, no sinkers have ever been found here, nor has anything been found evidencing white contact.

Artifacts.

No whole pots were obtained, but in an ash midden the writer obtained sufficient pieces to reconstruct about eight inches of the rim of a very large, deep cooking pot, which would have measured about 20 inches in diameter. In this ash midden were also obtained three polished bone awls and one chert arrowhead.

Portions of two clay pipes were found, both of the conical-bowl, short-stem type common to East Texas. No beads or pendants were found.

Two small polished celts of granite were found. Manos found there are largely oval, some round.

The arrowheads veer away considerably from the more common East Texas types. Very few of the rounded, unshouldered type occur, but more with decidedly squared stem bases, and decided barbs. As aforesaid, the majority of points found are well made microliths, or bird points; of these, about 60% are the square stem-base type, but about 25% are of the side-notched type, which occur in increasing proportion among the Wichita or Taovayan sites a little farther west. The writer also found on this site a few extremely finely made serrated small points.

Two flint drills were obtained, one being 4 inches in length, and of rather unusual type. One well-fashioned flint spear, 4½" long was also obtained.

The writer found no burials, but the owner of the land found one about 15 years ago, under the roots of a long-dead black walnut stump which had been used as a gate-post; the bones were powdery, and disintegrated quickly; nothing else was found with them; the burial was prone.

In the ash midden mentioned were found many animal bones, largely of deer and squirrel. The larger deer bones were broken open, to afford the marrow.

The owner of the property stated that during the last 20 years many hundreds of artifacts were picked up on the site, so the scientific evidences to be obtained now are consequently deficient.

One mile south of this site the writer obtained a well-made back corner-tang knife of gray flint, deeply partinated, length 3½ inches.

Anilco, a Lost City

The "capital of the kingdom of Anilco", is buried under the town of Troyville, La. Hernando De Soto saw Anilco in 1542 at the height of its prosperity. From accounts of De Soto's followers, a contemporary historian, Garcilaso the Inca, wrote: "It is on the banks of a river wider than the Guadalquivir and has about 400 good houses, with a beautiful square in the middle. The dwelling of the cacique is upon an eminence which commands the town. The lord was, at the arrival of the troops, in front of this place at the head of a battalion of 1,500 men, the elite of his subjects."

Through the succeeding centuries the great mound, probably the one upon which the "palace" stood, was variously an object of wonder and a nuisance. About 10 years ago it had practically disappeared, providing earth for highway operations near Troyville. It was at this time that Winslow M. Walker, then a member of the staff of the Bureau of American Ethnology, started digging into the foundations, which had been left intact by the highway engineers.

Mr. Walker tentatively identified the great mound with the city of Anilco, but he found that the prosperous Indian town of four centuries ago had represented only one stage in an occupancy of the site extending into an unknown antiquity. The original occupants, he found, had been members of an unknown Indian race whose culture closely resembled that of the Mound Builders of the Ohio Valley. They had constructed the first part of the great mound, carrying masses of clay from nearby lowlands in sacks made of skins and packing down hard each load after it was dumped into place. After a platform a few feet high had been built in this manner something happened. Work was stopped and the surface became littered with campsite refuse—ashes, charcoal, burned and broken animal bones, and fragments of clay pots. This resting period lasted long enough for two small trees to take root and grow on the slope.

Whether the same people who built the original mound were also responsible for the second stage of construction is not certain. They introduced important changes. A portion of the fire-littered slope between the two pecan stumps was dug through and a line of stout posts was set up, the butt of each extending down several feet into undisturbed soil, and tamped about with mottled clay. Inside this palisade a level platform several feet wide was built and over it was spread a layer of reddish yellow sand. Two logs, one on top of the other, were placed outside the posts on the down slope, which was left with a smooth, slippery surface, almost as if it had been oiled. A little farther along at the base of the slope nine logs were laid in a pile, each carefully cut and trimmed at both ends. A series of long slabs, mostly of hickory, was laid on the slope. A little above them a gully, or hollow, had been filled by placing in it two logs. Over the top of these logs was placed a covering of cane layers many inches thick, which were constructed in form of great sheets made of split cane stalks, each thickness crisscrossing the one beneath it.

At the western side of the slope a stepped approach was constructed up a gentle incline. It was made by placing four logs to serve as steps, with palmetto fronds and grasses covering the otherwise slippery treads. A human head without the jaw was first deposited below the log at the bottom of the stairway. This may have been a symbolic cornerstone for a temple. The head may have come either from a captive of war or a common slave, or it may have been one of a number formerly decorating the tops of the enclosing wall of posts. Other smaller mounds in the neighborhood probably were built in the same way. These were all dome-shaped and as building progressed they finally were incorporated into one great mound, which assumed the form of a terraced platform.

At this point, unfortunately, the archaeological record ends. The story must be picked up in the narratives of the following of De Soto, perhaps many centuries later when the site was occupied by entirely different people. The destruction of the upper levels of the mound was a most unfortunate occurrence, from the point of view of those who are trying to recover the lost pages of American prehistory.

TRILOBITES

The life cycle of earth's most ancient known animals now is being studied at the Smithsonian Institution by Dr. H. B. Whittington, paleontologist of the University of Birmingham, England, with a large collection of fossils collected in the rocks of Virginia's Shenandoah Valley.

These animals were trilobites. They were shelled crablike creatures, more closely resembling the king crabs of North America's Atlantic coast than anything else living but only very remotely, if at all, related to these curious, long-tailed sea animals.

The trilobites first appeared on earth about 500,000,000 years ago, in the so-called Cambrian geological period. They were among the first animals that left any fossil remains. Apparently they existed in enormous numbers, crawling along the bottom or swimming in the shallow waters of low beaches.

For well over 100,000,000 years they remained the dominant creatures on earth. About 300,000,000 years after their earliest known traces they became extinct. By that time the first amphibians were emerging from the seas to become the ancestors of the reptiles and mammals. The reason for the extinction of the trilobites is completely unknown. They may not have been able to endure a radical change of climate. More efficient animals which had come into the seas, such as the ancestors of the present mollusks, may have destroyed them.

Even when they left their first fossil traces these trilobites must have been a very old race, for they were highly developed and specialized. They began to leave records of their existence in the sea-bottom which gradually was compressed into rock when they acquired hard shells. They ranged in size from creatures hardly bigger than ants to some more than 18 inches long.

The Shenandoah Valley fossils being studied by Dr. Whittington date from the Ordovician geological period about 400,000,000 years ago when the trilobites were in their heyday.

Apparently during their life cycle, these creatures shed their shells, and also the underlying skin, ten to twelve times. The smallest, presumably representing the infantile stage of the animal, were no larger than pinheads. In the later stages the shells were broken in segments by the shedding process, and Dr. Whittington's hardest job is to fit these pieces together.

The trilobites were segmented and each segment of shell was a separate piece. This arrangement enabled the animal to roll itself up in a ball for protection. The work of assembling the pieces of one animal, or of very similar animals, is like that of assembling the most delicate and complex sort of jigsaw puzzle.

From all this is expected to come a fairly complete life story of the individual trilobite from the time it acquired a shell to the time it died and sank in the bottom ooze.

possible road across St. Vincent.

Here Morton collected for the Smithsonian more than 5,000 specimens of plants, some of which may be new to science. The flora of St. Vincent is exceptionally rich, Morton points out, because the island is one of the rainiest parts of the world, with an annual precipitation estimated at about 200 inches.

Farming, with plants introduced from the outside, is confined to the periphery of the island, the interior being extremely mountainous. The introduced plants have made little progress away from the shores.

Botanists' Paradise

Washington, D. C. A "haunted valley" in the high mountains of the island of St. Vincent in the Lesser Antilles proved a botanist's paradise for Conrad V. Morton of the Smithsonian Institution staff, who is one of the three white men known to have entered this isolated spot.

Here is found a dense tropical rain forest of tall, vine-tangled hardwoods in whose branches perched the brilliant blue and yellow St. Vincent parrots which live only on this island—a scene not essentially different from what would have been found before man entered this part of the world.

The valley has a bad reputation with the native population, who referred to it as the "place of the werewolves." It is extremely difficult of access, nearly surrounded by a 2,000-foot-high mountain ridge. The only break in this ridge is closed by a 100-foot-high waterfall.

Within historic times, Morton found, two other white men have been in the valley. The existence of the place only became generally known when it was visited by a government engineer surveying for a

Favorite Illustrators of Children's Books

By ISOBEL GORDON

There is quite a bit of Peter Pan in many of us when it comes to love of children's editions, and many adults have been won over to the writing of children's books because of appealing illustrations. Children's editions have many devotees among collectors.

It was not until about the middle of the eighteenth century that story books for children came into existence. Though children, proving themselves to be the discerning critics many of us know they are, had appropriated three great books of the world: Pilgrim's Progress, Robinson Crusoe, and Gulliver's Travels.

Thomas Bewick stands out because of his revival of the art of wood-engraving and the new method of obtaining color by use of the white line. Some animal illustrations he did for a children's book were so popular that he began the History of British Quadrupeds which he published in 1790. This was followed by British Birds, the first volume in 1797 and the second volume in 1804. Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre spoke of her pleasure in looking through Bewick's History of British Birds.

George Cruikshank's illustrations for Grimm's Popular Stories brought increased happiness to children from the date of its appearance, as Thackeray said, who did some delightful drawings himself for his Christmas fantasy The Rose and the Ring.

John Tenniel, though his cartoons appeared in Punch for over thirty years, lingers in our memories for his portrayal of Alice in Wonderland and Through The Looking-Glass.

Charles Henry Bennett, a self-taught artist, excelled in his illustrations for Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress and Aesop's Fables.

Arthur Gaskin's Christmas book, King Wenceslas, and his illustrations for Anderson's Fairy Tales are remembered for their definite decorative character.

The artist, Henry Ford, decorated with distinction and much success the different "colored" Fairy Tale Books of Andrew Lang, also Aesop and the Arabian Nights.

Walter Crane, whose art is unmistakable and who illustrated over seventy books, recalls to mind his illustrations in particular of Grimm's Household Stories and Spencer's Faerie Queene.

The individuality and somewhat morbid imagination of Beardsley were shown in the Morte d'Arthur.

Charles Robinson has done some delightful illustrations for A Child's Garden of Verses and other favorites.

Kate Greenaway's delicate pictures of the quaint propriety of old-fashioned childhood are unique in character; J. D. Batten's illustrations for The Arabian Nights are very realistic.

Nor can we neglect to mention Arthur Rackham's illustrations of Fairy Tales and Christina Rossetti's Goblin Market.

We remember, with nostalgia the

BOOK NOTES

Books are, as said truly by Caroline Norton, "Silent companions of the lonely hour".

We note that Stark Young, especially famous a few years ago for his novel SO RED THE ROSE, has designed another unusual Christmas greeting card. We discovered and sent many of the beautiful paintings he made for last Christmas, besides keeping two for our own Christmas card collection.

It seems remarkable to us that one who has distinguished himself in the profession of teaching, writing and journalism, should command his ability in the painting field.

The change in India's government on August 15, has recalled Kipling's writings to us and some random notes and thoughts about his career.

Born in Bombay in December, 1865, he had a native nurse and knew India and its peoples so well he could write of conditions with great realism. Though he spent his school days in England, in the traditional manner, he returned to India when he was about seventeen and worked for two newspapers there. This gave him an insight into political conditions, — sometimes not so clearly recognized by him as by his countrymen in India, who frequently taunted him about current political maneuvers.

His versatility was proved by his many books. His forceful realism and ability to weave a spell of romance were new and an expression of the movement or revaluation of ideas and life.

Kipling's stories for children will always be read by them with delight. The adults know what a master he was of the short story. Once, in a group of short story writers, the question arose as to which was the best short story of modern times (this was in the 1890's). It was decided to write down the answers, and when the titles were read it was discovered that the six best short stories, in these experts' opinions, were six different stories — all written by Kipling: WEE WILLIE WINKLE; BA, BA, BLACK SHEEP; WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY; THE MAN WHO WAS; THE MAN WHO WOULD BE KING; and THE SHIP THAT FOUND HERSELF.

It has been said that Kipling was never offered a peerage because he made an allusion to Queen Victoria as "the widow of Windsor". We know he did not scruple to use his verse for a new imperialistic patriotism.

He married an American, and though they lived for a time in his wife's home state of Vermont, they were not completely happy. Later, he with his family left America and made a very happy settlement in England. There he had a very handsome estate, Bateman's, and was visited by many former friends and well-known persons.

We are sorry to hear the line will become extinct with his daughter's and his sister's death, as neither one had children.

On September 15, the death of Richard Le Gallienne, Mentone, France, was reported. He died there in his sleep in the villa where he had lived for many years. Little has been said or written by Le Gallienne since his period of greatest popularity in the 1890's. He was one of the contributors to THE YELLOW BOOK, the first number of which appeared in April, 1894. Nothing like THE YELLOW BOOK had been known before and it became, partly because of its color and also because of its modernism, the novelty of the hour. Le Gallienne wrote an essay on THE BOOM IN YELLOW but

Early Rifles in the U. S.

W. H. Over, curator of the Museum of the University of South Dakota, calls attention to an interesting rifle in the Museum's collection made by one James Golch, 1736, and reflects on our early firearms history.

"It is well known that early Europeans brought to this country many guns of all types, mostly flintlocks, but later those of percussion action. Also, during the 15th and 17th centuries, many gunsmiths arrived here from different countries of Europe, and, as there was a great demand for guns this offered an opportunity to employ their craft and skill. Most of these gunsmiths came to Pennsylvania, but a few settled in New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Connecticut. At first it would be expected that these smiths made guns patterned after those they had been making in the old countries, but different environments and conditions soon demanded a different firearm from the old country models. Due to the thickly populated colonies in Pennsylvania and the demand for guns the gunsmiths of this state soon gained a reputation for their craftmanship. Here they developed the accurate long range rifle but rarely any two alike for they were custom made guns, for one went into the shop and ordered a gun according to his own plans. During 1700 they were practically all flintlocks with octagon barrels of different lengths and with full length or half length stocks of hard maple wood. These rifles were developed about 1720. There is one in the Museum with the makers name, James Golch, 1736, stamped on the lock. It has a 39 inch barrel, full length maple stock, brass trigger guard and receptacle for oiled patching in the shoulder stock. Most of these early rifles do not have makers name on the lock but many of them have brass trigger guards and other brass ornamentations.

"It was these flintlock rifles that George Washington used so effectively with his soldiers later in the century. The accuracy and lightness of these guns gave our soldiers an advantage over the enemy with their heavier large bore guns.

"About 1820-30 from this same muzzle loading rifle evolved the percussion action rifle later known as the "Kentucky" and "Daniel Boone" rifles. The powder was ignited by a percussion cap instead of a spark from a piece of flint, which made these guns more certain of firing and much more convenient.

"At first the boring and rifling in all these early guns was done by hand, but later machines had been invented to do this as well as make other parts of the gun. In the collection of rifles in the Museum there is one of these early percussion rifles stamped as being made by the "Union Rifle Works", while on the top of barrel there is the name, B. Dempster, who was probably the original owner.

"Today we can contemplate the labor expended in making these rifles and comparing them with our modern rifles which are all turned out by machinery by the same mold, the only slight difference being in the size of the caliber."

Wisconsin Gun Collectors

The Wisconsin Gun Collectors Association was scheduled to be held at the Schroeder Hotel in Milwaukee, October 11th & 12th. Sam E. Smith of Markesan, Wis., president of the association and his committees arranged for a special tour of the famous Nunnemacher collection of arms at the Milwaukee Public Museum.

Muzzle-Loader Shooters To Organize

During the meeting of the Stone Age Fair at Loveland, Colo., recently, the Muzzle Loading Rifle fans held contests in the afternoons, when old-time firearms were demonstrated, including a flint-lock rifle. Ira Harsbarger, curator of the Pioneer Museum and manager of the Stone Age Fair, informs us that efforts are being made to form a permanent organization of the Muzzle-Loading Rifle hobbyists and conduct annual contests.

MUSKET LORE

Arthur T. Ward, New York City collector, discovered the following informative musket lore in a publication of some 75 years or so ago.

MUSKET, or MUSQUET (Fr. mousquet; from mouchet, a sparrowhawk; in the same way that other shooting implements were named falcon, falconet, &c.), the firearm for infantry soldiers, which succeeded the clumsy harquebuss, and has recently itself given way before the Rifle (q. v.). The first muskets were matchlocks; after which came wheellocks, snaphans or snaphance muskets; and lastly, percussion muskets, which were a vast improvement, both for accuracy and lightness, on all which had gone before. Compared, however, to the present rifle, the musket—familiarily known as Brown Bess (possibly a corruption of Ger. büchse, a hollow tube or gun)—was a heavy, ugly, and ineffective weapon.

MUSKETRY, an obsolete weapon, was a short musket of very wide bore, carrying a ball of five ounces, and sometimes bell-mouthed like a blunderbuss.

MUSKETRY, Schools of. When the introduction of the Minié rifle in the French service, and the subsequent arming of the British troops with the still more delicate Enfield rifle in 1851, brought the accuracy of a soldier's fire to be an important consideration in estimating his value (which with the old musket was not the case, as it was proverbial that the bullet never hit the point aimed at however carefully), the English government at once saw the necessity of providing instruction in the manipulation of the rifle. Accordingly, instructors of musketry were attached to the troops, one to each regiment; and to give further encouragement, a school was established at Hythe in 1854, under Colonel (now General) Hay, where lessons on the theory of arm, and practice in its actual employment, were the sole occupation of the day. Officers and promising men were sent there as fast as the accommodation permitted; and after a course of a few weeks were able to return to their corps, and become instructors to their comrades, so that in a comparatively short time the shooting of the whole army rose in a surprising degree. Whereas, before the establishment of this school, the English stood low in the scale of shooting, the competitions held during recent years at Wimbledon have demonstrated that no nation can now excel them as marksmen. The formation of the volunteer corps, in 1859, led to a greatly increased demand for musketry instruction, which the government met by forming a second school of musketry—on the same footing as that of Hythe—at Fleetwood, where, on the vast sands of Morecambe Bay, the troops and volunteers of Scotland, Ireland, and the northern English countries find the necessary teaching. The two schools are superintended by an inspector-general of musketry instruction, with subordinate instructors. The inspector-general is responsible also for the instruction throughout the regiments all over the world. Under him are the district inspectors, regimental instructors, and sergeant instructors.

The total cost of musketry instruction for 1864 amounts to £37,095.

The Fire Piston

The principle of high-compression ignition, fundamental in the Diesel engine, was discovered originally by the primitive people of the Malay Peninsula and the East Indies long before their first contact with white men, and was rediscovered centuries later by German engineers.

One of the fire-lighting gadgets of the Malays, the fire piston, described by some ethnologists as the most remarkable of primitive inventions, is now in the collection of the Smithsonian Institution. It consists of a tightly wrapped plunger which is forced into a wooden cylinder at the bottom of which is placed a bit of tinder. The plunger, hit by the hand, compresses the air beneath it and generates sufficient heat to light the tinder. The Malays then take out this tinder, fan it into a flame, and use it to start a fire.

In the Diesel engine the same principle is used for the ignition of oil, making possible an engine without any special ignition system. This invention of some unknown Malay—or more probably development over several generations—spread throughout the Malaysian area and was at least a thousand years in advance of the German engineers. It is probably the most efficient of primitive fire-making methods, which included rubbing sticks together by means of the fire saw or the fire plow, getting sparks from flint when struck against iron pyrites, and the use of the fire drill consisting of two sticks set in motion with a bow or strap, or operated as a pump drill.

This is by no means an isolated instance of "inventions" of primitive peoples preceding some of the most brilliant ideas of twentieth century inventors, says Herbert W. Krieger, U. S. National Museum curator of ethnology. There was a striking case of a few years ago when it was found that Fiji Islanders long ago had solved an outstanding problem of the American textile industry. This was the problem of winding a spool of cord in such a way that it could be unwound with even tension. Engineers and inventors worried over it for years, and when a successful device was finally hit upon, essentially the same principle was found in the Fiji twine ball in the National Museum collections. This prevented patenting the device and resulted in a saving of millions to the textile industry as a whole.

Miniature Orchestras and Dance Bands

By VELMA SEARLES

Both the lives of my late husband and myself have been centered around music — a fine art. My husband came in for his share of it in the theatrical world.

It is my love for music that provided the inspiration for my hobby of collecting miniature orchestras and dance bands from all over the world. My hobby began about five years ago. My husband, unwittingly, was the starter of my now formidable collection. He bought me a plastic girl band as a remembrance. My friends got the project really under way by subsequently remembering me with new sets from the various places they visited.

Each birthday and Christmas thereafter has meant an addition to my growing and interesting family. My latest arrival is a ten-piece Mexican band made entirely out of straw. The orchestras are really lifelike except for their size, the only concession to fantasy being three animal orchestras: one Dalmatian dog orchestra, one hand carved dog orchestra, two cat orchestras made of china and a monkey band also made of china. I must admit that my collection is in keeping with the spirit of the United Nations — I have a representation from many of the countries and hope to have, in time, every country represented by an orchestra or band. Along with my collection of orchestras and bands I also have miniature organs and pianos. I have ten pianos several of which have music boxes. They are made of china and wood; a favorite of many is a little china pottery organ which gives a worthy rendition of Rudolph Friml's "Song of the Vagabonds," from his immortal "Vagabond King."

My orchestras have been enthusiastically received. I do not know of a single observer who has not found, at least one certain group of special interest to him or her; on the numerous times the collection has been displayed before clubs and the general public, it has aroused interest.

I am finding encouragement in the development of my hobby now that our import trade is gradually getting back to pre-war status. This will make possible future delivery of items from almost every nook on this planet.

Supplemental to the miniatures, I am compiling scrapbooks which will give the observers a little lesson in the history and background of the music of the different countries represented in my collection. I find this a stimulation of my own interest and knowledge of music and believe it will impart the same to my friends in an informal and interesting manner.

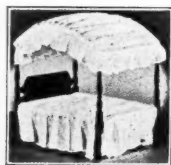

This hobby affords an outlet for my emotions and love for music and musicians . . . it provides me with a good medium of meeting new friends and holding the interest of old ones.

Like other hobbyists, there is the housing problem. They'll soon be in the cabinet of their own, as it is now they are separated over the house and the danger of accident is too great.

Miscellanea

This seems a good time to bring in a bit about the interesting history of cigar bands. There is a story that cigar bands were designed to appeal to the taste of the ladies. Cigar smoking among the elite of femininity used to be the fad. No less a renowned personage as Lillian Russell smoked cigars. No doubt she, along with other members of her sex disliked handling cigars with lily-white fingers.

The cigar band originated in Cuba about 1854 through the efforts of a prominent tobacco man, H. Anton Bock. One of his reasons for originating the band was because he noticed that sometimes his good cigars would be removed from the box and poor ones substituted.

oOo

The oldest cigar band that has been found is one printed in 1858. It used to be the custom to print cards for special occasions and this one was printed for a banquet in honor of Cyrus W. Field after completion of the laying of the Atlantic cable. The band showed a picture of Mr. Field, and if you have one of these in your collection you have one of the oldest and most historical cigar bands extant.

New Collector Starts Unusual Hobby

A collector-friend of HOBBIES reports an unusual hobby: Collecting all the books which to date have received the Pulitzer Prize for excellence. These include drama, fiction, history, poetry, etc. It is an inexpensive hobby for him, and each year he adds the current year's prize-winning books. He says, at most, his cash outlay is less than $100 a year and yet the library will be a heritage worth having. Meanwhile he enjoys his hobby by actually reading the books and eagerly anticipating each year's awards.

It's an idea for librarians too, — but no doubt many already follow it.

DISPLAYING MY SHAKER COLLECTION

By Mrs. O. A. CHARLSON

In our new home we plan to have a breakfast bar instead of the usual breakfast nook. The bar itself as well as the wall back of it (forming a sort of a backbar) will be pine paneled. There will be tiny shelves (mirror backs) for the display of the most outstanding shakers of my collection. The shelves will have glass doors with a minimum of wood frame work. The shelves will be recessed into the wall, and will be built on both ends of the backbar. There will be no shelves in the center section, measuring about three feet. Here will hang my lovely oil painting "SHAKERS," which was painted, according to my suggestions by a talented artist.

The background of the picture is a lovely Hawaiian scene authentic in all details. The hotel, beach scene, volcanic mountains, and ocean are all there. An exact replica of one of my shaker sets, a large Hula Hula SHAKER dancer and her boy friend playing the guitar is featured on the beach. The audience, other hotel guests, airplane, the ocean vessel, etc., are all copies of actual shakers. All shakers used in the picture will be displayed in a recessed open shelf directly beneath the picture. All other choice shakers will be in glass cabinets, heretofore described.

The Picture POST CARD

LOCAL POST CARD CLUBS

By BOB HENDRICKS

In the past year or two, local post card clubs have been forming throughout the nation. These clubs encourage the hobby, for members actually meet and exchange cards with others of their own interest.

Prior to this time, most all exchanging has been done by mail but these new clubs have given Deltiologists a chance to get together and exchange viewpoints. There are four well known post card clubs located in four widely separated cities of the United States. These four clubs have more than 150 persons who regularly meet to exchange, talk, visit, and have social gatherings, picnics and outings. The membership is growing steadily.

Probably the first post card club was the Cleveland Post Card Club of Cleveland, Ohio. This club was originally started by Gordon F. Weiner, an enthusiastic card collector of many years. He gathered together a group of collectors in Cleveland and proposed the idea of a local club where collectors could share their hobby.

Several months later, Joseph J. Nardone, noted deltiologist of New York City also took the initiative to gather together a group of collectors in New York City. This enthusiastic group, now numbering more than fifty members, called themselves the Metropolitan Collectors of New York City. In February, 1947, 23 persons gathered together in Los Angeles and formed the Southern California Post Card Club. This club found it necessary to incorporate the entire Southern California area for many persons traveled up to 20 miles to attend a meeting.

A little later, Wm. H. Richardson of New Orleans banded together a group of deltiologists in that city to call it the Magnolia Chapter of the Post Card Collectors Club of America. This group is especially interested in collecting historical cards.

A quick glance at your map will tell you that these four clubs are widely spread throughout our nation. Too far apart for the benefit of the majority of the post card collectors. Too few are able to attend these wonderful group meetings and share in their pleasure. However, the fact remains, in the past two years four post card clubs have come into being, and there is no reason why others might not be formed in other cities throughout the nation, to bring collectors into closer union.

Among other live centers for club groups are Kansas City, Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Washington, D. C., San Francisco, Detroit, Philadelphia, and Columbus. There are 94 cities in the United States, both large and small with three or more post card collectors — enough to establish a post card club.

The use of a home, club room, school auditorium or gymnasium, or public library will provide a suitable meeting place until better accommodations are to be had. Duties of a club can be assigned to officers, who will work together in providing interesting and active meetings for all who attend. Club dues should be kept to a minimum. Many hours of pleasure and educational benefit can be derived by these meetings.

neglected to credit Whistler as the decorative originator. Later, in 1896, he wrote in his PROSE FANCIES most charmingly of green; in this writer's copy of THE YELLOW BOOK for January, 1897, one of his PROSE FANCIES is about THE SILVER GIRL. Apparently the subject of color predominated in the writers' and artists' thoughts in that somewhat "purple period".

Eva Le Gallienne, the actress, in her book AT 33 has little to say of her father; the book was dedicated to her mother, Le Gallienne's second wife. From all accounts of him, however, he had great charm and was much sought after for his companionship by the writers of his time.

GEMS AND MINERALS

MINERALOGICAL THOUGHTS

By W. SCOTT LEWIS

Novelty Gem

Cassiterite, the ore of tin, is one of the strategic minerals which this country needs most and if you can find a mine, you may make a lot of money. We have collected some samples of pure cassiterite from the Orient and each one is cut and polished so as to make a perfect cabochon. These are real novelties, black with a metallic luster.

Perhaps a Sermon in Stone

Graphic Granite is a rock consisting quite largely of feldspar containing a bladed type of quartz. A polished section cut at right angles to the direction of the blades sometimes seems to be covered with Hebrew writing. This rock occurs as a phase of a large pegmatite dike at the Pala gem mines and was formerly used for making vases and other art objects as it takes a fine polish.

Zinc Spinel

Dana mentions the Cotopaxi mine, Chaffee Co., Colorado, as a locality for this rather uncommon zinc mineral, and through a contact at the Colorado School of Mines we have been able to secure a quantity of ore from there which shows the Gahnite scattered through rock.

Minerals as an Investment

One morning back in 1930 we purchased three zeppelin stamps at the Los Angeles postoffice for $4.55. We afterward disposed of them at a profit, but today we note these same three stamps advertised for $101.00 as a special bargain. That indicates a whopping profit for someone and leads us to believe that the time will come when rare minerals will also increase greatly in price. There have already been many price increases and as the supplies of desirable crystals and handsomer minerals in dealer's hands gradually disappear, the price is certain to rise much more. Many mineral localities are entirely exhausted and others are going fast. Collectors who visit mines that were formerly noted usually come home disappointed and we predict that those who collect minerals of the best quality will find their value increasing with the passing years.

A Rare Zinc Ore

Zinc has been called the most self sacrificing of all metals, the reason being that the electrical and chemical reactions that cause corrosion take place in it more readily than in most other metals, so when it is present, it gives its life to save them.

Large quantities of zinc are used in the rubber industry and in making pigments. It forms the coating on all galvanized iron and is an important part of such alloys as brass and bronze. It is used to precipitate gold from cyanide solutions. It is a very important metal and domestic supplies are rapidly disappearing.

Most of the zinc minerals are becoming scarcer all of the time but recently one of the rarest has been found in a large enough quantity to supply a number of collectors with specimens even if it never adds any zinc to the national stockpile.

Austinite (named for Prof. Austin F. Rogers, the noted mineralogist at Stanford University) was first described in February, 1935. It occurs as very small, colorless crystals on rock. These are bladed or scepter-like in shape and belong to the orthorhombic system. Chemically this mineral is a basic arsenate of zinc and calcium having a specific gravity of about 4.12. It comes from Utah.

In 1937 a Bolivian mineral having minute prismatic crystals was described under the name "brickerite", but it has now been found to be identical with austinite. As the latter name has priority, any of our readers fortunate enough to have a specimen of brickerite should change their labels accordingly.

Florescence

A hobby that is making great strides in collecting is fluorescent minerals, which can be found in most any neighborhood. Some of them look like rocks or clods of dirt until they are put under new X-ray machines which bring out the florescence of the minerals therein. Some of these ugly looking specimens contain a richness of colors that are almost unbelievable. A new development brings out this florescence under daylight.

November Birthstone

Who first comes to this world below
With drear November's fog and snow
Should prize the Topaz's amber hue
Emblem of friends and lovers true.
Old Verse

Topaz and Citrine are the two birthstones for November. Their color is similar and very frequently Citrine is called Topaz — Citrine is Topaz Quartz but true Topaz is a precious stone of great hardness and its color is a deep velvety saffron. Because of its hardness it is possible to produce a brilliant polish and it is, therefore, particularly adaptable for use in rings, clips, necklaces, bracelets and brooches.

Golden Topaz is the best known but Topaz is also found in blue, green, pink, violet and occasionally red. For years the colorless Topaz was confused with diamond.

Most Topaz are found in Brazil, Ceylon, the Urals and the United States.

The symbolism of Topaz is particularly intriguing — Topaz is the symbol of cheerfulness and pleasant dreams. It was also valued as a cure for insomnia. Later Topaz became the emblem of friendship and love and for that reason today it is frequently used as an engagement stone.

Citrine, the alternate November birthstone, is of a different composition than Topaz but it is beautiful in its own right.

It also has a range of colors from palest yellow to deep orange-red. Although not as hard as Topaz it is said to be more durable. Sometimes distinguished by the term "Brazilian" or "Spanish" Topaz, it is chiefly found in Brazil.

"At the Sign of the Crest"

ATKINSON Coat-of-Arms

By MABEL LOUISE KEECH

Atkinson

He beareth for Arms: Per pale azure and gules a double-headed eagle displayed or, on a chief engrailed the third a rose of the second between two martlets of the first. Crest — An eagle as rising or, winged ermineo right claw supporting a sphere argent.

The above description of the Atkinson Armorial Bearing is taken from a bookplate in the possession of Mrs. H. C. Scrutton, of California. With slight variation, showing different branches of the family, it is found in Burke's General Armory, and books on the Atkinson family.

Translated into non-Heraldic terms: A shield divided in half vertically (per pale), the right side blue (azure) the left red (gules). We read a shield as though we were holding it in position, thus the dexter or right side is on our left, and the sinister or left side, on our right, as we look at the picture.) Across the lower two-thirds of the shield is charged a gold (or) eagle with a double head, and with talons and wings spread (displayed). Across the upper one-third is a gold ("of the third" color named) band, called a chief, and it has an escalloped (engrailed) edge. In the center of the chief is a red ("of the second" color named) conventional rose, between two blue ("of the first" color named) footless birds called martlets. The crest is an eagle with wings raised as ready to fly (rising), with its right claw supporting a silver (argent) sphere. This eagle is gold, but its wings are a form of ermine called "ermineois", the background being gold instead of the usual white, and studded with the conventional ermine spots of black.

"Per pale" has the same meaning as a pale, which is a vertical stripe in the center of the shield one-third of its width, and extending from top to bottom. The pale "denotes military strength and fortitude, having been bestowed on those who have impaled or otherwise defended cities or who have supported the government of their sovereigns, 'for standing uprightly to their prince and country'".

The eagle is the king of birds, usually represented with wings displayed. It is emblematical of "a man in action, evermore occupied in high and weighty affairs, and one of lofty spirit, ingenious, speedy in apprehension, and judicious in matters of ambiguity". The displayed wings stand for protection, and the gripping talons "rending and ruin to rebels and evil-doers".

One of nine so-called "Honorable Ordinaries", straight-sided figures one-third the width of the shield, first symbols used to identify men encased in armour, the chief is a horizontal band across the upper one-third of the shield. It holds the most important position on the shield, the head, and the symbols charged upon it are considered of more importance to the bearer than those in the base or lower part of the shield. The chief symbolizes rank, dignity, authority and dominion.

The red rose indicates some association with the House of Lancaster, as it was their badge during the War of the Roses.

The martlet, or footless swallow, is a messenger bearing good tidings, never resting during its flight when carrying messages, and therefore needing no feet! The martlet was also used as the "differencing symbol" for the fourth son of the family, —granted to him because the fourth son inherited no land, and, therefore, needed no feet. As a differencing symbol the martlet is found in the upper right corner, or upper center of the shield, and is smaller in proportion than a regular symbol.

The sphere possesses a geographical or scientific reference, but unless one could delve deeply into ancient family history, it would be impossible to say why this particular sphere was given as a crest to this person by the name of Atkinson.

Colors are representative of the personal characteristics of the original bearer, and are granted only upon merit. Blue signifies loyalty and truth; red, courage and magnanimity; gold, generosity and elevation of mind; ermineois, the same as ermine, purity and nobility.

The mantling was a large scarf of cloth or leather thrown over the helmet to protect the neck from the heat of the sun; the armour from rust; and to foil the enemy's sword. When used as a decoration for paintings and otherwise, the outside must be the main color of the shield, and the lining the main metal. The artist makes a conventional design from the rent mantling. The wreath of six strands must be twisted alternately of the metal and color, and holds the crest to the mantling.

You may recognize the colors in this picture by the color code: blue, horizontal lines; red, vertical lines; gold, dots; silver, plain; ermineois, dots for gold with black ermine spots or tails.

The particular family to which this Coat-of-Arms belongs, came to America from England, probably London, only three generations ago. The owner has no past history on the family except that her grandfather was Christopher Chapman Atkinson and married Catherine Howard. Her great-grandfather managed the first sugar refinery in London, but his family came originally from the north of England.

The grandfather died when his five children were all under twelve years of age, but their mother saw to it that they were well educated, one of them becoming a lawyer.

In trying to connect her family with the English ancestry, I came across a most excellent book, called "The Families of Atkinson of Roxby and Thorne, and Dearman of Braithwaite", by Harold W. Atkinson, published in co. Middlesex, near London, in 1933.

It is beautifully arranged, names in block type, carefully paraphrased, maps, signatures, bibliography, sections on allied families, royal lines, and several lines extended to the United States.

The Atkinsons of Conistan and Appethwaite are supposed to be descended from a John Atkinson temp (in the time of) Henry IV, who married Margaret, daughter and co-heiress of Frislington (now Frizington) in co. Cumberland. First with descendants, mentioned on this page, is one Thomas, admitted, in 1594, as a Brother of the Merchants' Guild, Carlisle.

Thomas had a brother MILES, who had a son, a grandson, and a great-grandson named Christopher. There were other Christophers among his descendants, recorded as late as 1795; and no Christophers mentioned among the other Atkinsons whose records are spread over more than 100 large pages in the book. This, therefore, is the logical branch to search for my friend's ancestors.

By the way, the Coat-of-Arms blazoned for this branch was the same as that owned by Mrs. Scrutton. There were several others, some similar, some entirely different, described for other branches. This is another good omen that I have touched the right line.

Another interesting book for Atkinson, not exactly a genealogy, but stories of the newcomers of the name in this country in the 17th and 18th centuries, especially in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, is "Atkinsons of New Jersey".

Among these early settlers was another Christopher, who arrived with John at Philadelphia in 1699. They were Quakers, and had come from the agricultural district of co. Lancaster, England. They brought their wives, and children, and "all their worldly goods"! Some of their relatives were awaiting them.

James and Thomas, also Quakers, arrived in 1681, on the "Antelope" from Belfast. (This does not mean they were natives of Ireland, though they might have been.) James particularly, seemed to have an influence in the life of the Church, and was a Grand Juror in Gloucester Co., N. J., in 1686. Thomas dealt mostly in timber lands and sawmills, Haddonfield, N. J., being his last home. A bricklayer and stone mason by profession, most of his handiwork was gone long before, but one house of his building was still standing, in 1890, on the estate of William Albertson. Mr. Albertson was a wealthy man who had a deer park, and race course on his estate for the entertainment of his friends!!

A William Atkinson came to Burlington, N. J., about 1683, probably from London. And a Samuel lived there before 1719. His father came with William Penn. Samuel owned many slaves about whom he felt much concern, and in his will requested that they be taught to read the Scriptures, and to be freed at the age of 35 years.

A fascinating autobiography of Wilmer Atkinson of Bucks Co., Pennsylvania, published by the J. B. Lippincott Company, was not quite completed at the time of his death at the age of 80 years, and his wife and daughter arranged it for the printers. It is packed full of exciting adventures in business and private life. He was the founder of the Farm Journal. Mr. Atkinson was a descendant of the John, of the brothers Christopher and John mentioned above. He says they were from Scotford, Co., Lancaster, England, and that their father was William, lost at sea.

Surely many of my readers are descended from some of the Atkinsons spoken of here, and if you have more stories, please send them on, and we will include them in later issues.

You whose ancestors are from other countries than England will please pardon me for running three times in succession, names whose ancestors are found only in England—not even more than a generation or two in this country. This is only a "happen-so", not planned. It would be impossible to give you my plan for featuring different families, for sometimes there isn't any! Often-times the next article depends on one of you, and how do I know whether you are going to be English, Dutch or French? Then, too, it is very difficult to get sufficient data in English, or that be translated into interesting reading, on families from the continent who have not had several generations of Americans of American history. Most of the authentic Holland families I have already written. Suggestions and helps from my readers are always welcomed, even if I can not always accept them.

Found Pleasure Thru It

Illinois.—HOBBIES has given me pleasure and useful information over a period of years so I am enclosing a check for a subscription to a friend that she may also enjoy it. Please mail to Mrs. .... It was during the last war I became interested in antiques, when our two sons were called to the service. This interest seemed to give me a new outlook on life. I'm only sorry not to have known years ago how much pleasure a hobby can give one.—Mrs. W. F. Powers.

Doubled Business

Connecticut.—You are doing a wonderful job for me through HOBBIES and I sure do appreciate it. My business has more than doubled itself within the last 5 months. While all the dealers in my locality are busy crying at their lack of business mine has gone ahead by leaps and bounds. My files are full of "wants" that total into the hundreds of dollars.—Irving Kolbin.

A Right Away—Hurry

Indiana.—If there is one thing I am prompt about it is renewing my subscription to HOBBIES. Wouldn't want to miss a single issue. It's the best magazine for the money that I know of.—Mrs. Ray Linn.

oOo

And the Meat of Hobbies

New York.—The day that HOBBIES arrives, my family eats bread and milk.—Ruth Van Dusen Teeter.

Ad Does It

Kentucky.—Have been pleased with my current ad and its response. Have had many interesting letters and responses. The magazine has been a source of joy and a veritable companion since my first copy in 1941, while I was recuperating at Bethesda Hospital in Cincinnati. You will recall the article "Tea Pot Hobby" of Mrs. Balthiser. My introduction was similar. It has been a real friend since. When the doctor advised a hobby of some sort, and cups and saucers became my pursuit, little did I dream it would end in such a pleasurable venture afforded by your magazine. I wouldn't be without HOBBIES if I had to forego all the others.—Howard Gross.

Just Comment

Missouri.—I wish to compliment the publisher on the splendid editorials. If more such men had the conviction as he and spoke forth (I know the lack of confidence we have learned to create in the last ten years) our world and especially our dear U. S. A. would be freer of the distrust.—Mrs. W. H. Loomis, Jr.

oOo

Brings Orders

New York.—There's nothing like HOBBIES to get the orders. We like Bill Kane's articles.—Mrs. F. L. Seville.

oOo

Best Of All

Nebraska.—I like HOBBIES best of all the magazines to which I subscribe. I am interested in dolls. Can't we have something on Bonnet dolls?—Mrs. A. E. Stephal.

A Right-Winger

Tennessee.—I enjoy your editorials even if I am a Democrat—not a New Dealer.—Josephine J. Nichols.

Record Of Fair Dealing

Washington.—Please know I can't afford to be without HOBBIES. It brings the antique shops of America to my door. As a seasoned buyer of antiques by mail, I have assembled much pattern glass for table use—glass that is my pride and joy. In securing this glass over the past years, I have had correspondence with almost 2000 antique dealers. I assure you this has been a very pleasant experience. Have returned only one piece of glass during all these years of buying, and that one was packed and sent me by mistake. This, I believe, is a record truly worth mentioning. And wonder of wonders, replies to my ads placed with you as far back as 1944 are still coming in. That proves back copies of HOBBIES are saved and cherished. All my copies of HOBBIES are beautifully bound. I refer to them often, as the feature articles are forever worthwhile to the student and collector of antiques.—Carolyn J. Fish.

Spreads the Field

Rhode Island.—Here is my renewal check for HOBBIES. A year ago today it was on its way and I hope for many years to come. This is my seventh year and the copies are bound in your HOBBIES binders. They are borrowed, and as a result a friend has subscribed and entered the antique business. So keep up the good work. I'll be waiting month by month for the magazine.—Vivian K. Martin.

Old Rookwood

Maryland.—I was truly grateful to find the material from Harper's New Monthly Magazine on Cincinnati Pottery of May, 1881. I own a Rookwood pitcher vase by Martin Retig of 1883 and the article makes it more interesting than ever.—Alfred J. O'Ferrall.

No Bunk About It

Illinois. Until I ran my first trial ad, I thought your claims for your advertising pulling-power were just the usual balldoo. Perhaps I had "beginner's luck" with that ad, but I am convinced enough. Therefore, please use the following copy for the next two months.—T. T. Foley.

Montana Ranch

Montana.—Please renew my subscription to HOBBIES, a very wonderful magazine. This is the best $3 I ever spent. I look forward to Mr. Lightner's page and hope that he is improving every day. The world needs more men like Mr. Lightner, according to several of my friends who have met and visited with him while attending his antique and hobby show.—Mrs. B. C. Keith.

That's Right

New York.—And here is a little trade last for Mr. Lightner—because I have consistently followed his advice on "middle of the road" prices, business is fine. No blues in this section of fabulous Flatbush.—Mrs. Leone M. Tullsen.

Helps Club Work

Maine.—We have a very interesting "Hobby Club" and with the magazine, we are never at a loss for material covering the various subjects in our programs.—Mrs. Waldo Deane.

Keeps 'Em Working

Virgin Islands.—The results from our ad in The Mart have been highly satisfactory. In fact I'll be glad when it is omitted and we can have a breathing spell. How's that for a recommendation?—Mrs. Paul F. Miller.

Finds Reliable Advertisers

Delaware.—Days would certainly be lacking their salt if HOBBIES should expire! Time hangs very heavy until it comes. Reading the ads is next best to visiting shops, but I surely enjoy the articles. I like the collector's pictures of their hobbies and the various stories about them, the human interest angle. As there are people of all kinds in this world, so I am sure that there are in the antiques business. Practically everyone has their faults, and so some personalities appeal to various peoples! All the advertisers I've written to from HOBBIES have been the "live and let live" kind, generous and patient in describing merchandise and cordial, even when the correspondence proves fruitless. I am not a large collector, so many times it is the little things that mean much. Ethel Loring, Shirley Shattuck, John David Miller, High Meadows, just to mention a few, are shining examples to me of fine people to deal with. Goods are always very well packed, adequately insured, notice sent me when goods are shipped, and merchandise well described. So a tribute goes to HOBBIES and its high standard for quality advertisers! Last, and very important, please find check for my renewal.—Mrs. Milton D. Yerkes.

Some Think We're "Tched"

Oregon.—I can't begin to tell you the fun I have corresponding with different dealers. One dealer in the East made the remark is one of her letters that people who liked antiques were "touched in a very beautiful way," and I think that she has summed it up correctly. Mr. Lightner's editorials are read the first thing and are well worth the time and effort he must spend to compile such an interesting page. Thanks again to HOBBIES for taking this housewife into the interesting annals of antiques.—Agnes Ludwig.

Bottle Bug

Nebraska.—I can't get along without HOBBIES as it sure is a great help to a collector besides all the information one gets about so many different things. I had an ad in January and got good results. I added to my bottle collection more than 700 different specimens.—A. F. Burnett.

oOo

Button Bug

Kentucky.—Would rather have HOBBIES than the evening local paper. My button collection has grown with HOBBIES. I now have about 10,000 buttons.—Mrs. Theo. E. Deddens.

A Necessity

Nebraska.—I can't get along without HOBBIES. I cannot tell you how much I enjoy Mr. Lightner's editorials. It is fine in these times to know there is some one fearless enough to come out and tell the truth. May your health improve so we may have more of the editorials and HOBBIES! What would we do without them.—Vernon D. Hill.

oOo

Real Enjoyment

Pennsylvania.—If every $3 spent brought as much pleasure as my partner and I get from reading HOBBIES, this chaotic post-war world would seem to be a Utopia.—Nancy Chalfant.

oOo

Goes Into Verse

Illinois.—Three bucks for HOBBIES every year. Can bring a lot of pleasure. I wish each dollar that I spend would always bring such treasure.—Anna E. Bottorff.

In 1820

Life was different in these United States in 1820. The Old Countryman, a newspaper for those of Scotch, English, and Irish extraction, published in New York in that year, carries an ad for one Robert Little, No. 138 Grand Street, N. Y. which states:

"We have on hand constantly, a large supply of fresh Portuguese and American leeches, which we apply at the very lowest prices. It shall be our aim to give entire satisfaction to those physicians, and others who may employ them. All orders for leeches to be left at the medical stores of Dr. Hortsen, 139½ Grand Street, and J. Maunders, corner Canal and Varick Streets."

In the same edition, the Farmer's Hotel of Boston advertised for the trade of the traveling public:

"Single gentlemen, or gentlemen and their families, arriving in Boston, from the various manufacturing and other towns in the country, and from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, or other cities South, will find at the Farmer's Hotel every comfort and convenience, and at very moderate charges."

"The greatest care will be taken of horses belonging to travellers putting up at the above house—David Cummings."

Other thoughts of the day, are quoted in these notes:

"Mysterious Sound: The wide spread of a sail of a ship, rendered concave by a gentle breeze, is a collector of sound, 'It happened,' says Dr. Arcott, 'once on board a ship sailing along the coast of Brazil, far out of sight of land, that the persons walking on deck, when passing a particular spot, always heard very distinctly the sound of bells, varying as in human rejoicings. All on board, came to listen and were convinced; but the phenomenon was most mysterious. Months afterwards, it was ascertained that at the time of observation, the bells of the city of St. Salvador on the British coast, had been ringing on the occasion of a festival; their sound, therefore, favoured by a gentle wind, had travelled perhaps 100 miles by smooth water, and had been brought to a focus by the sail on the particular situation or deep where it was listened to. It appears from this, that a machine might be constructed, having the same relation to sound as a telescope has to sight."

Even then radio was a long way from development for Marconi was not born until 1874, which was some 54 years later than the foregoing item.

"Night in the Desert," is the subject of an article by a Mrs. Elwood who writes of an overland visit to India. Says she:

"Ere we again set off, daylight had vanished, and darkness set in, if darkness that could be termed, which was only a milder and a milder, softer day. The stars were uncommonly bright, and by their friendly beams we were enabled to see objects as distinctly as by those of a full moon. The nights in the desert were certainly transcendently beautiful, and beyond anything I ever had a conception of before; the atmosphere was so clear, the air was so pure, that I could almost have turned Sabae, and adored the Host of Heaven. The camel-drivers generally sang as they marched, and their wild melodies had a very pleasing effect, falling upon the ear from the distance, or, reverberating among the rocks, awaking the sleepy echoes of the desert. They sang in parts; the front, the middle, and the rear of the caravan, thus keeping up a communication with each other as they stalked onwards. Occasionally the deeu baying of a dog, the melancholy cry of the jackal, or the roaring of wild beasts, hoarsely resounding among the mountains, threatening death and destruction to the solitary traveller wandering through this howling wilderness."

Under the heading of Mississippi, this news item is quoted:

"The governor of Mississippi in his message says that a good degree of health has been enjoyed in the state and notwithstanding a long drought with which it has been visited, the crops have been good, industry is flourishing, and the late treaty with the Indians within its borders will be of advantage to the state. The receipt into the Treasury have amounted to $61,381.14½ cents, and the expenditures have amounted to $52,553.71, leaving a balance on hand of $18,111.34."

Under the "Wit and Humor" column we find:

"A Curious Refusal. A Gentleman having prevailed upon a young lady to whom he was engaged, to give him her miniature, promised him in return, as soon as he should find a good artist. The lovers meanwhile, had quarrelled. The gentleman desirous of making his peace, said, 'I have just seen a fine miniature, by the celebrated E.....; mine shall be executed next week if you say so.' 'It is a matter of indifference to me,' she replied, 'which is executed, you or your miniature, for I have resolved to accept neither.'"

In January, 1775, and in February, 1776, troops embarked at New York and sailed to Albany. The winter of 1778-9 was much milder than the present. Peach trees blossomed in Pennsylvania in February, and in that month, farmers in Connecticut plowed land for seed.

—From A Publication of 1780

DESTINY: A tyrant's authority for crime and a fool's excuse for failure.

FREEDOM: Exemption from the stress of authority in a beggarly half dozen of restraint's infinite multitude of methods. A political condition that every nation supposes itself to enjoy in virtual monopoly.

LIBERTY: The distinction between freedom and liberty is not accurately known; naturalists have never been able to find a living specimen of either.

FUTURE: That period of time in which our affairs prosper, our friends are true and our happiness assured.

HAPPINESS: An agreeable sensation arising from contemplating the misery of another.

GEMS AND MINERALS

Whether true Topaz or Citrine is selected for the November birthstone, the warmth and brilliance will bring happiness throughout the year.

Among the famous people born in November are Benvenuto Cellini, Warren G. Harding, Will Rogers, Jonathan Edwards, Mark Twain, Norman Thomas, Franklin P. Adams, Louise May Olcott, Marie Dressler, Mme. Curie, George Eliot, Voltaire, Spinoza, Winston Churchill, Maude Adams, Robert Louis Stevenson, Claude Monet, Andrew Carnegie, William Blake, Joseph Conrad, Charles A. Beard, John Harvard, General Bernard Montgomery and William Cullen Bryant. Certainly a colorful assemblage of names known to all of us for a great variety of reasons.

JADE FIND

A 600-pound nugget of jade, believed to be the largest of gem quality ever found in Alaska, has been discovered by two Chicagoans.

Harry M. Coleman, 41 and George

E. Van Hagen, 24 reported finding the fabulous piece of jade near the storied "Jade Mountain," during an eight-day prospecting trip into Alaska's interior. They believe it consists almost entirely of gem jade. The nugget is being flown to Chicago for expert appraisal and cutting, the amateur explorers said.

First sighted by Van Hagen, the nugget is approximately four feet long and 20 inches in diameter. Coleman, head of the public relations firm bearing his name, also reported finding numerous smaller jade fragments in creek beds of the Kobuk river in the area known as Shungnak, deep in Alaska's interior.

The country in which the discovery was made, according to Eskimo tradition, has been the source of jade for centuries. Archeologists have found Eskimo-made jade implements as far north as Point Barrow on the Arctic Ocean and south to Nome. Shungnak is Eskimo for jade.

Coleman said he also planned to bring home another 42-pound jade nugget which he and Van Hagen purchased from natives at the Shungnak settlement. The two men reported seeing several large nuggets of undetermined quality on Eskimo-claimed land, 500 air miles northwest of Anchorage.

Although the existence of jade in northwest Alaska has been known and reported upon for 50 years, no successful effort has been made as yet to recover it for commercial purposes. This has been due in part to inaccessibility of the Shungnak region and also the questionable quality of the mineral.

Last year an Alaskan mining company reportedly shipped several tons of jade-bearing rock from the Shungnak area. Assays proved most of the jade to be below gem quality. A small portion, however, met the highest gem requirements.

Much of the jade, Coleman and Van Hagan reported, bears a resemblance to serpentine or "green stone," which has no commercial value. However, Alaskan gem jade of superior quality is now in greater demand among certain jewelers than Chinese jade, which heretofore has been accepted as the standard of quality, according to the U. S. Assay Office.

The two men planned their trip into Alaska's tundra in search of jade after hearing stories about the so called "mountain" from Alaskan Major M. R. Marston, organizer of the Eskimo Territorial Guard.

Before the expedition into the interior, Coleman talked with Alaska's community business and government leaders about the possibilities of developing business potentialities in Alaska.

For Van Hagen, a former navy fighter pilot, the expedition ended a four-month stay in Alaska during which he made a complete tour with a team of medical men surveying the incidence of tuberculosis in the territory. He is a free-lance writer.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACTS OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912 and MARCH 3, 1933, of HOBBIES, The Magazine for Collectors, published monthly at Chicago, Ill., for October 1, 1947.

State of Illinois
County of Cook, ss.

Before me a Notary Public in and for the State and County aforesaid personally appeared O. C. Lightner, who having been duly sworn according to law deposes and says that he is the publisher of HOBBIES, The Magazine for Collectors, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1933, embodied in section 637, Postal Laws and Regulations.

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, O. C. Lightner, 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

Editor, Pearl Reeder, 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

Managing Editor, None.

Business Manager, None.

2. That the owner is Lightner Publishing Corp., 2810 So. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. O. C. Lightner, 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago; Roy Mosoriak, 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago; Pearl Reeder, 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning and holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

(Signed) O. C. Lightner, Publisher.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 1st day of October, 1947. (Seal) Pearl Reeder, Notary Public. (My commission expires December 15, 1948.)
